The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH

SEPTEMBER 16–22, 2002

EMBER DAYS, SEPT. 18, 20, 21

SHINE ON, FULL HARVEST MOON

The Harvest Moon, the full Moon that occurs nearest the autumnal equinox, falls on September 21 this year, just a few days before the autumnal equinox on the 23rd It's called the Harvest Moon because its moonlight in the early evening is a traditional aid to harvesters

Usually, the Moon rises later each night, but near the autumnal equinox, the difference in time of moonrise from one day to the next is much less Because the full Moon always rises at sunset it means that for several days in the fall, just when the days are starting to get shorter our well-lit hours are extended by the light of the Full Harvest Moon

The shadow of our traveling Earth
Hung on the silver moon.

-Charles Tennyson Turner English poet and clergyman (1808–1879)

A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day

Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)

Cows will clean better after freshening Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitus problems Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening. Will help rumen function over freshing Less feet problems and less stress

This is an over-all good booster if fed to dry cows, and it will pay you big dividends.

OPINION

Where's The Assistance?

Remember the old Wendy's commercial with the old lady asking, "where's the beef?"

Poultry producers aren't asking where the white meat is these days, but they need some real help.

Much large-scale livestock building has gone on indefinite hold in some communities because green groups, environmentalists, and others who think we can feed the overpopulated world out of thin air are stopping the construction of facilities.

The page 1 story we have features prominently in the minds of public officials: anti-agriculture ordinance legislation. A lot of it comes from Tom Linzey, staff attorney for the Community Environmental Legal Defense Fund (CELDF), outfitted in Chambersburg.

It seems that Linzey spends a lot of time working to ensure that what he calls "corporate farms" are kept out of backyards.

Linzey calls ag production in the hands of a few corporations "catastrophic to consumers, family farmers, and our environment."

Like many who are ignorant of farming, Linzey believes in the Disneylike, gradeschool-embellished, Rockwell-inspired bucolic farm scene of a happy farmer who is taking care of just a few cows on a few acres and making a great living from it. And those days — if they ever were — are long, long gone.

The reality of trying to make a living in farming in the doubleoughts: big is not only better, it may be the only way for a farm to survive.

In a videotape made by CELDF, Linzey insists that he is "flooded" by requests from his help from 60 townships. There are about 2,800 townships in the state. How is that "flooded?"

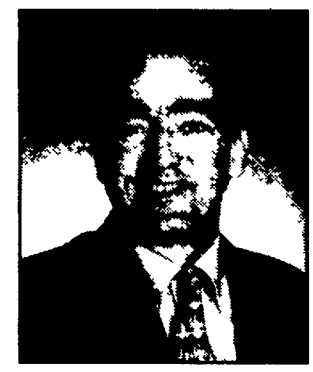
The big issue: Linzey noted in a press release that in November 2001, agribusiness interests brought suit against a Fulton County municipality in attempt to overturn an ordinance. A Washington, D.C. law firm, Arnold & Porter, offered to represent the municipal government pro bono, noted Linzey. Thousands of dollars were spent in the process — and ag producers are stuck with the bill.

Clearly, big poultry production companies have to realize what is happening and must find a way to help defray these costs. In the end, it's their chicken, eggs, beef, and other products that will rely on these large-scale family-owned enterprises to survive — they have a stake in this too and should come to bat.

So where are they?

Will we hear from them?

Stay tuned.



Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Prevent West Nile Virus On Your Farm

With the increasing presence of the West Nile Virus this summer and fall, farmers should take steps to reduce the risk of contracting the virus on their property.

Based on surveillance findings, the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection assumes the virus is present throughout the state. In other words, the potential for disease is present. The case of a 66-year-old man in Lancaster County brought an increased awareness of this possibility. Although the virus is commonly transmitted through the bite of an infected mosquito, it only takes one. However, not all mosquito species carry the virus and not all mosquitoes in a given swarm carry the virus.

Jay Smoker, Lancaster County West Nile Virus coordinator with Penn State Extension, points out that farmers and residents should be proactive in removing places where mosquitoes breed. Theoretically mosquitoes can breed in any standing water, but they generally do so where there is decaying organic matter that serves as food for the larvae.

An often overlooked habitat on the farm is the water trough. Animals drop bits of forage in the trough and this provides an ideal breeding spot. Larger troughs that have no outlet are more prone to cause problems.

The simplest solution is cleanliness. Clean out the trough every few days. Brush down the sides and bottom of the trough to get out all debris. For those larger troughs where water must be conserved, another way to control larvae is with a biological pesticide, an IPM approach. This product comes from a naturally occurring bacteria found in the soil. The product releases a protein that floats on the water surface and disrupts the larva's feeding process, causing it to starve and die. It is safe for animals and humans. These are marketed under the trade names Mosquito Bits and Mosquito Dunks in many hardware stores and farm supply houses. The dunks are doughnut-shaped and can be thrown into any standing water. One dunk will treat 100 square feet.

For larger applications, the granules are applied with a lawn seeder or motorized backpack blower to tire piles, retention ponds, and marshy areas. The trade names for these are Vectolex CG and VectoBac CG. The effectiveness for all these products is three to four weeks depending on inflow and outflow. Always consult the label for each product.

Old buckets and containers lying around the farm are places where mosquitoes breed.

Often overlooked habitats are rain gutters that are clogged or do not drain properly. Old tires are still the biggest breeding ground for mosquitoes. Drilling holes in tires and splitting the tires are effective ways to keep water from collecting in the tires. A third way to control mosquitoes in tire piles is the use of the larvicide material previously described. Regulations permit the use of old tires to cover bunker silos. But the growing need to remove mosquito-breeding places in the community raises the importance of being good neighbors by controlling mosquito-breeding in your tire piles.

To Be Aware Of West Nile Encephalitis In Horses

Horses are the farm animal species most susceptible to this virus. Jay Smoker points out the virus can affect the central nervous system and cause encephalitis.

Clinical signs may include one or more of the following: loss of appetite and depression, fever, weakness of hind limbs, paralysis of hind limbs, impaired vision, ataxia, head pressing, head tilt, aimless wandering, convulsions, inability to swallow, circling, hyperexcitability, or coma.

Since there are other similar diseases that may exhibit similar signs of encephalitis, it is important to have a definitive diagnosis. A positive diagnosis of West Nile encephalitis can be made by examining the blood from an infected horse.

Some horses exposed to the virus may not show any signs, or only vague signs of the disease. To date there is no treatment for horses infected with West Nile; however, the symptoms in weakened animals may be managed and they should be protected from injuring themselves.

A conditionally licensed vaccine for horses is available. The efficacy of the vaccine is still under review. It is important that a series of two doses be given 3 to 4 weeks apart. Owners should keep records because current testing methods cannot distinguish between vaccinated and infected horses, especially in regards to international shipping of horses.

Chickens have not shown any ill effects from the West Nile virus. In fact they are used as sentinel birds to detect the presence of the virus. They develop antibodies to the virus which is confirmed through blood tests. However, the meat poses no danger to the consumer. Cattle also do not show any symptoms of West Nile encephalitis.

An information sheet for West Nile Encephalitis in Horses is available from your local extension office or online at www.pested.psu.edu/spWestNile.html.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

A PLACE FOR THE COMPLACENT

Background Scripture:
Zephaniah.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 55:6-11.

We can learn a lot about Zephaniah in just his first sentence: "The word of the Lord which came to Zephaniah the son of Cushi, son of Gedaliah, son of Amariah, son of Hezekiah, in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah" (1:1).

Remember, Hezekiah was the king of Judah who instituted sweeping reforms. He was followed by his son Manasseh and grandson Amon, both of whom uprooted virtually all of those reforms. Zephaniah, thus, is the great great grandson of Hezekiah, a prince of the royal household and the second cousin of Josiah, the present ruler, whose reforms are even more extensive than Hezekiah's. Furthermore, we may assume that his ministry preceded and helped Josiah's reforms.

Remember also what was happening on the stage of the Middle East. Assyria still dominated this world and was in control of Palestine. Under Manasseh, Judah had become Assyrianized, adopting Assyrian lifestyles and religious practices. Essentially, they took a little bit here and a little there, mixing these diverse religious practices into one great cultic stew: worshiping the Baals in the "high places," practicing the Assyrian worship of the stars ("hosts of the heavens"), participating in the cult of the Ammonite deity, Milcom, and copying Philistine worshipers in "leaping over the threshold" (1:9).

Homogenizing Faith

This was not toleration of other religions, but an indulgence in them. The danger to faith is not in tolerating others, but in adopting bits and pieces of them for ourselves.

As Dwight Stevenson warns, "When there are many faiths, the people tend to have little faith." This does not mean that we should not sometimes borrow from another faith — Christianity has done that from the beginning — but that we do not fail to commit ourselves solely to Christ because we fear that perhaps that faith is not enough.

During World War II, just prior to battle, a certain U.S. soldier was observed taking communion in a Protestant service, attending Roman Catholic Mass and counseling with a Jewish rabbi. "I didn't want to take any chances," was his defense. But that's what faith is: taking chances, betting your life that the faith to which you have committed your life is for you the right one.

Nor should we evaluate the progress of other peoples solely on the basis of how much they become like us. A McDonald's on every corner is not the same as the kingdom of God.

Numbed By Complacency

Zephaniah's prophecies were directed at the peoples in his own day, yet they have surprising relevance for us today. The wrathful judgment of God is imminent, says Zephaniah, not only upon the Jews, but all peoples, because of the evil rampant everywhere: violence, fraud, the homogenization of various religions into a lowest-common-denominator social cult, corruption in high places and exploitation of those in low places, a selfish indifference to the plight of others, and a soul-numbing complacency.

At this time, the dreaded Scythians were spreading through the Middle East like a swarm of locusts. Possibly his prophecies were inspired by fear of them. He sees a cataclysm from which only a remnant of faithful people would emerge, and not just a remnant of Hebrews, but faithful people from other lands: "... that all of them may call upon the name of the Lord and serve him with one accord." (3:9b). From it would emerge a golden age in which the centrifugal force of the Tower of Babel would be reversed.

It was not many years later that disaster came upon Judah and its neighbors, but it was not the Scythians, but the Babylonians. And there was a restoration and new beginning for the people of Judah, but it was not a golden age, which was postponed until the coming of Christ and the kingdom of God. There is always the judgment of God and, after the judgment, always the grace of God to those who will receive it.

And for the complacent, there is also a place for them!

Five-Acre Corn Contest Offers A 'Harvest' Of Information

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Entering and winning the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Corn Club Contest may not necessarily be about winning.

For corn grower Steve Wenger, his goal and emphasis centers on the information he can glean from the results.

"I don't enter the contest to win," he said. "I enter the contest because . . . I can look for strengths or know what I need to improve."

Steve took home a second place in the shelled grain non-irrigated, tilled class in the 1998-2000 three-year average award division with a yield of 220.8 bushels per acre and a plant population of 37,636 using NK N82J6.

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Jim Musser has a sign in his office that reads, "Problems are only opportunities in work clothes."

As a grain dealer and processor, that attitude has helped him stay in business for the past 15 years since purchasing M&R Grains Inc. from his father, Harold Musser, and his father's partner, Jay Rohrer.

Jim Musser went to work in his father's operation soon after graduating from high school in 1969. He went on to marry and raise four sons on the 70-acre farm purchasing the grain business and the farm in the mid-1980s.

President's Message

Guy Wagner
President PCGA

Hello, my name is Guy Wagner. I'm the president of the PCGA. I'm proud and honored to be PCGA president.

It's been an exciting year for PCGA. We conducted our conference Feb. 5 in Grantville and we had a good turnout and an excellent program. Ed Winkle's program has generated a lot of interest in the Nu-Till system. I have been using it for the past two years, resulting in excellent stands and my best yields ever.

I'd like to suggest that everyone look at Ed's 14 step handout from his presentation. It has worked very well for me.

I would like to personally thank all of our speakers. I think they all did a fantastic job.

PCGA made some big changes in 2001. The first was our name change from the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association to the Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association. This has brought us more in line with the other state organiza-

CHEESE, BUTTER WEAKEN

- Blocks fall below support.
- Butter down to $0.9250/ pound.
- Cheese, butter production up.

Not much in the way of good news for dairy product prices. Both cheese and butter traded lower at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Block cheese declined from $1.1575 per pound on Tuesday, Sept. 3 to $1.13 per pound on Friday, Sept. 6. Barrels fell $0.0227 per pound during the week to $1.08 per pound by Friday. Butter traded just twice this week, ending at $0.9250 per pound by Friday.

The only recent market news is USDA's Dairy Products report. It indicates dairy product production for the first seven months of the year is well ahead of a year ago, something the market already knows. Cumulative 7-month production relative to the same period a year ago is as follows: American cheese output is up 5.3 percent, total cheese output is up 2.0 percent, and butter output is up 13.9 percent. That compares to total cumulative milk production for 20 select states, which is up 2.6 percent.

Experts On Hand To Interpret Farm Bill At Farm Science Review

LONDON, Ohio — Farmers with questions about how the new Farm Bill affects them can find the answers at the 2002 Farm Science Review, Sept. 17-19, at the Molly Caren Agricultural Center near London, Ohio.

Experts from state and federal agencies will be on hand to help visitors sort out the programs and provisions that could affect their operation.

"This is an opportunity for the producers to get firsthand information on the implementation of the 2002 Farm Bill. The program and provisions can get quite complicated," said Larry Adams, state executive director of the farm service agency (FSA).

"When a new farm bill is adopted, it almost always includes pretty sweeping changes to programs that greatly affect the farm operations and cropping decisions of Ohio's farmers," said David Hanselmann, chief of the Ohio Department of Natural Resource's Division of Soil and Water Conservation. "There is a very keen interest in these changes and people usually have a myriad of questions."

To get the answers, visitors can stop by Federation Park at the corner of Beef and Friday avenues. Adams, Hanselmann, and other staff from the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, Division of Soil and Water Conservation, USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) and FSA will be available between 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. to answer all your Farm Bill questions.

Daily informational sessions will also be offered in Federation Park. Each day at 10 a.m. Hanselmann and Kevin Brown, NRCS state conservationist, will describe the bill's conservation programs. At 2 p.m., Adams and other FSA staff will detail how the bill affects crop programs.

Manure Liability On Farm Science Review Agenda

LONDON, Ohio — Livestock producers should be aware of manure liabilities to protect themselves against neighbors making a big stink.

Producers, farm operators, and other visitors to the 2002 Farm Science Review will be able to question the authority on environmental regulations and laws and preventative measures to reduce manure liability, Sept. 17-19.

Large and small-farm owners face increased concern about manure handling and application as it becomes more of a social issue, said Peggy Hall, Ohio State University Extension Agricultural and Rural Law Program director. Everyone is interested in manure because they want to prevent problems that could affect them or the environment.

With an increase in the number of large farm operations in Ohio, manure handling becomes a larger issue, which forces producers to be more aware, said Hall. Without taking precautions, livestock producers could be liable for nuisance problems, waterway spills, land application problems, and others.

Open Meetings For Pa. Dairy Producers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — In an effort to provide further insight into current market conditions, industry trends, and what cooperatives are doing to help, the Northeast Council of Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) and Dairylea Cooperative are hosting two informational meetings. The meetings are open to all dairy producers and will give participants an opportunity to discuss issues together and have questions answered.

The first meeting is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the Georgetown Fire Hall on Furance Road, Georgetown. The second meeting will be Friday, Sept. 20 at 7:30 p.m. at the Leola Family Restaurant on Route 23, Leola. Refreshments will be served.

Times are tough right now with low milk prices and poor crops — we as dairy farmers are under a great deal of stress." said Lewis Gardner, chairman of Dairy Farmers of America's Northeast Council. "I want to bring producers together to talk about the current conditions and the positive outlook for the future of the industry."

"It is virtually important that we as dairy farmers work together to maintain the strength and viability of the Northeast dairy industry," said Clyde Rutherford, president of Dairylea Cooperative.

Bradford County Extension Plans Barn Meeting

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — At a recent dairy teleconference in various cooperative extension offices across Pennsylvania, Ken Bailey and Lou Moore, economists with Penn State University, and Joel Rotz with Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, presented up-to-date information concerning the future outlook for dairy and grain prices.

They also presented information on the new Farm Bill, and more specifically on the new dairy provisions of the bill.

From a dairy production standpoint, the information presented offered everyone in attendance a good look at milk production trends, cow numbers across the country, cheese and butter production, along with offering some insight into reasons for the drastically reduced milk price being paid to dairy farmers.

On the grain side, Lou Moore indicated significant decreases in possible corn harvest for the 2002 year in comparison to the last few years. He also took a look at the general outlook of the overall U.S. economy.

Finally, Joel Rotz, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, offered information on the new Farm Bill.

So that this information can be distributed to a larger audience, Martha and Chris Young, LeRaysville, have agreed to host a barn meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 18, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The Youngs recently completed the construction of a new freestall barn that can house about 100 head of dairy cows. In addition, they milk in a seven-stall flat barn parlor that has been in operation for a couple of years.

The agenda will be informal with the opportunity to view the new facilities and talk with your neighbors and fellow dairyproducer. At about 8:15 p.m., extension will offer a quick update on the dairy economy, fill you in on provisions of the new Farm Bill, and attempt to answer any questions you may have on either topic.

Farm Service Agency representatives along with county extension personnel will be in attendance.

Directions: Take Rt. 467 into LeRaysville, turn at the church in the middle of town, head toward Neath, about one mile to the farm.

Lancaster County Weekly Cattle

New Holland, Pa.
Report Supplied By USDA
Friday, September 13, 2002

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2360	1740
LAST WEEK	2708	1557
LAST YEAR	2145	1644

Compared to last week, slaughter steers sold mostly steady. Prices dipped early in the week, especially on lower quality steers. However, on a good run of better quality steers later in the week, the bulk of the steers sold .50-1.00 higher. Holstein steers sold with a weaker undertone on a thin test. The majority of the Holsteins were underfed or lighter weight steers, which caused some to be discounted heavily. However, with the price of corn on the rise everyday, many producers are opting to ship them to town early instead of feeding them out. Slaughter heifers remain in relatively short supply, with the few coming through the ring this week trending weaker on light tests. Slaughter cows sold fully steady to mostly .50 higher, with a few fleshier cows selling up to 1.00 higher. The bulk of this weeks cow run was made up of lean cows, with boners and breakers a little tougher to come by. The good runs of lean cows did not seem to affect buyers as bidding was active on all types. Slaughter bulls sold steady to weak on a lighter test than last week. The direct feedyard trade broke loose Wednesday, with feedyards in the Southern Plains moving finished steers 2.00 higher at mostly 66.00, with the Northern yards also 2.00 higher from 101.00-102.00 on a dressed basis. Most of the gains can be attributed to the October live cattle contract at the CME holding a healthy premium to the cash market, which closed at 69.70 on Thursday. This weeks supply included 33 percent slaughter steers, 3 percent slaughter heifers, 38 percent cows, 2 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

CALVES: Compared to last week, vealers sold steady to firm on good runs. Large slaughter calve runs continue to be light, therefore a trend was not established. MASTITIS PREVENTION — IT'S IN YOUR HANDS
Dr. Arlen Mills
Capitol Region Extension Veterinarian, Lebanon

If we stop for a minute and think just what has to happen for a mastitis infection to occur, it's quite simple. The bacteria have to get into the quarter to create the infection that is mastitis. And there really is only one way for them to get there and that is through the teat orifice.

Bacteria do not get into the udder in any other way. It makes sense then that the further we can keep any bacteria from this "doorway," the better are the odds of preventing quarter infections. And healthy teat ends — or doorways — are an important factor in mastitis prevention.

In troubleshooting mastitis problems or high somatic cell count in a herd, one of the things to look at is teat ends. Are they healthy and normal or are they prolapsed and irritated? An irritated, cracked teat end is an open door to mastitis. Milking equipment, chemical irritation, environmental factors, and some infectious agents can damage teat ends. Genetics also plays a role, as some types of teat structure are more prone to damage than others.

Dr. Arlen Mills

Pulsators that do not work properly or vacuum levels too high or too low are a common reason for damaged teat ends. Low vacuum levels prolong the milking procedure, thus allowing more time for tissue stress on the teat end. If pulsators are not working properly, the teat end will not be massaged during the rest phase of milking and the teat end tissue will be damaged.

Improper prep with poor milk letdown will cause teat end damage as will over milking at the end of milking. Applying vacuum to a teat end with no milk flow is like running an engine with out any oil and the consequences of both are disastrous.

Chemical irritation of teat ends may occur from some teat dips that have been exposed to temperature extremes, particularly freezing temperatures. I have also seen teat ends damaged by improperly mixed teat dip solutions. Some teats, especially those of heifers, can be sensitive to certain chemicals, such as chlorine dips.

Environmental factors may include everything from poorly designed stalls that lead to teat trauma to sunburned teats. Cold weather brings teat chapping and frozen teat ends. Cold weather is always a challenge to teat end health. I do not like to see producers stop post-milking teat dipping in cold weather, but it is necessary to have dry teats on cows that must exit a parlor into a cold wind in freezing temperatures. Dipping and then drying is one solution to this or perhaps putting up a shelter to protect cows until they are back in the freestall area would be a solution.

An infectious agent that has been especially troublesome in the last few years is the herpes virus that causes mammillitis. This problem pops up when the weather changes and is most likely to affect heifers. Teats become red and often large pieces of teat skin dry up and come off. These teats become impossible to milk and mastitis is the result. This infection is very contagious, so any affected cows need to be segregated and milked last.

Be sure the teat dip you are using kills both bacteria and viruses and has the proper level of teat conditioners — usually 10-12 percent. Some producers are using an equine herpes vaccine in an effort to prevent these viral infections. Avoid using salves in treating damaged teats, because the salves have been shown to increase the probability of hand transmission of infectious agents. Or the container of salve may become contaminated and serve as a source of new infections.

The fewer bacteria there are at the "door to the teat," the less likely it is that any will get through the door. Clean stalls, especially the rear third where there may be udder contact, is critical. Regular grooming of stall beds will pay dividends. Barrier dips are also an effort to keep bacteria away from the teat orifice and they certainly have their place — after clean, dry stalls.

Some bacteria like to live on skin and especially damaged skin. Normal skin is coated with substances that retard bacterial growth. Chapped and irritated skin loses this protective coating. This allows bacteria numbers to increase, increasing the chance of teat end exposure. Make sure the teat dip you are using not only kills bacteria on the teat skin but also promotes healthy skin. The National Mastitis Council has a recently updated listing of effective teat dips. This can be accessed online at www.nmconline.org.

It has seemed as if summer will never end, but before we know it, colder and damper weather will be here. These conditions will challenge teat health, so be ready be proactive by checking teats for signs of stress, have the milking system rechecked, and check out that teat dip.

Drought Relief Voted On During Farmers Union Fly-In

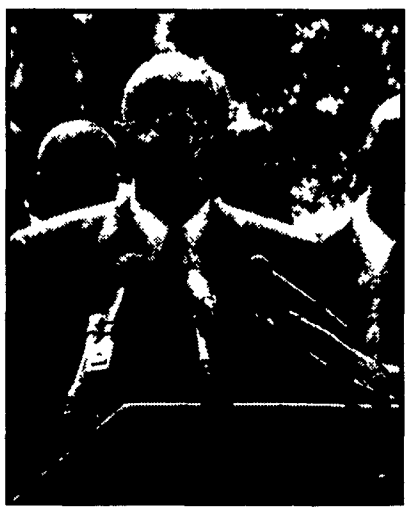
sage of the Daschle amendment to the Senate Interior Appropriations bill for emergency disaster assistance.

Tuesday's procedural vote in the Senate passed the amendment with a bipartisan 79-16 margin.

Although the amendment has many steps to go through before farmers and ranchers see any money, the vote was a positive first step toward financial relief.



Sen. Max Baucus (D-Mont.) right, has championed bipartisan legislation to appropriate disaster relief. He was joined by Sen. Conrad Burns (R-Mont.), left.

To appropriate the funds, the House will have to follow with similar legislation and President Bush will have to sign the bill into law. The President has indicated that he advocates taking disaster relief money from funds already earmarked for agriculture in the Farm Bill.

Sens. Max Baucus (D-Mont.) and Conrad Burns (R-Mont.) have been working with Senate majority leader Tom Daschle (S.D.) to attach their bill to the fiscal year 2003 Interior Appropriations bill that is now debated in the Senate.

Baucus helped to introduce the amendment that would allocate almosts $6 billion for the 2001 and 2002 crop years.

"We provide disaster assistance for other disasters such as earthquakes and floods," he said. "With these disasters, Congress steps up to the plate. It's the American way. I ask all of you here today to work doubletime extra hard and tell them (policy-makers) just how important this is . . . it's a matter of survival for farmers and ranchers across the U.S."

Baucus compared the income loss of recent crop years to the Dust Bowl drought years in the 1930s.

However, because of more advanced farming techniques, there is no erosion to get media attention, he said.

Burns noted that a disaster of this magnitude has not struck since the mid 1930s. If farmers used the same farming techniques as producers used in the '30s, this drought would have created a situation worse than the Dust Bowl, he said.

"It's been a long time coming," said Burns. "Our producers have been facing this dire situation for years now, and they need this support from Congress."

"The time when the amendment moves on to the House is when we really need the folks from back home to provide impetus and power" to call attention to the amendment so it will pass in the Houses vote, he noted.

Ben Nelson, (D-Neb.), said that this is not a bad crop year, but a no-crop year.

"This is not a situation like in the case of a flood or a hurricane that you can pinpoint a date. Hurricanes might get the right kind of attention," he said.

To address concerns about the cost of the Farm Bill, he asked, "what is the cost if we don't do this?"

Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) said, "we need to remember that most of our ranchers make a living selling calves. When they are forced to liquidate, they are literally selling any ability to produce new herds for the coming seasons."

Utah has experienced "four tough years of drought, and farmers must be given resources," he said.

Emergency disaster relief also drew the support of several national organizations. Iowa producer and National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) president Wythe Willey noted that "this legislation would go a long way toward keeping families on their farms and ranches.

"The Farm Bill doesn't address natural disasters and contains very little government assistance for livestock producers," said Willey. "Congress has tried to be fair with the Farm Bill, but nature isn't always fair."

"We have a very good Farm Bill, but it doesn't address shortfalls, it addresses price," said National Association of Wheat Growers Association president Gary Broyles.

News about the drought, along with disaster designations, assistance, weather, and climate information is available at the drought.fsa.usda.gov/ Website.

State Representation

Pennsylvania had seven Farmers Union representatives attend the event from Clarion, Columbia, Lancaster, Mercer, and Warren counties, with producers from various types of operations, according to Pennsylvania Farmers Union president Larry Breech.

Meeting producers from other states helped make the experience educational. "It's interesting that as different as it all is, how much the same the problems are," he said.

During a luncheon, several Farmers Union leaders and members gave an update on their home states.

National Cattlemen's Beef Association president Wythe Willey spoke on behalf of the organization to support disaster assistance.

John Hansen, Nebraska Farmers Union president, said that 93 of the state's counties have been declared disaster areas. "We're past culling," he said, and ranchers are now getting rid of foundation and longtime family-owned herds.

Carl McIlvain, Michigan Farmers Union president, reported that well over half of the state's 83 counties have been declared disaster areas because of a very hot April and cold, wet May.

Larry Breech, Pennsylvania's Farmers Union president, said that a drought hitting the commonwealth five of seven years means that "many of our producers haven't even had a chance to gasp," he said.

Diana Adamson, vice president of the Montana Farmers Union, fears a ripple effect from the economical situation of farmers to communities and schools.

Russ Kremer, Missouri Farmers Union president, said that rain delayed planting by two months. "This comes at a poor time as far as marketing opportunities, because our supply is even more captive" since their last independent hog buying station recently made a deal with a packer.

Louis Smith, Ohio Farmers Union president, reported that in fields where soybeans were no-till planted in corn fields, the residue corn stalks are still visible. Another effect of drought is the decreased demand for farm equipment, he said.

Gary Hoskey, Iowa Farmers Union president, said that although the state is looking at a pretty good crop, the Iowan delegation came to support other states.

Labeling Requirements Must Be Simple, Affordable

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Any country-of-origin labeling program for beef must create the greatest benefits possible for U.S. beef producers while minimizing costs to both producers and consumers. That was one of the messages delivered by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association August 9 to the U.S. Department of Agriculture as that agency seeks comments on developing the guidelines for a voluntary country-of-origin labeling program.

The 2002 Farm Bill called for a two-year voluntary labeling program prior to beginning mandatory labeling in 2004. The voluntary provisions that passed as part of the Farm Bill are consistent with NCBA policy. NCBA will continue to address concerns with mandatory provisions of country-of-origin labeling to ensure that producers receive a benefit without any undue burdens.

"NCBA members are concerned that auditing and verifying the claims made on the country-of-origin label could create costly regulatory burdens," said Jay Truitt, NCBA executive director of Legislative Affairs. "USDA's choices in this matter range from a simple, signed affidavit by producers to the agency implementing an integrated Process Verified Program.

The country-of-origin labeling issue is more complex for livestock and meat products than it is for fruits and vegetables because of international mobility of livestock. The statute clearly states the requirements for a U.S. country of origin label — born, raised and slaughtered; however, it does not say how that will be verified nor does it answer how beef produced from animals that move internationally will be labeled.

Start Clean Next Spring with Fall Sprays

If weather delays next spring's burndown applications, you could wind up with some real weed-control headaches in your Roundup Ready® soybean fields. That's where a well-planned, timely fall herbicide application can help.

Fall applications provide early burndown of actively growing weeds plus residual weed control to help you plant into clean fields next spring – just like spring burndowns do. But with a fall application your field will dry down faster for earlier planting, and insects may be fewer due to less weed vegetation. Populations of soybean cyst nematode may also be reduced.

Fall applications of Python WDG herbicide at 0.8 to 1.0 ounce, 1 pint of 2,4-D and 1 pint of Glyphomax® Plus herbicide per acre control tough weeds like purple deadnettle and henbit plus common chickweed, mustard, shepherdspurse, buttonweed, field pennycress, yellow rocket, wild mustards and early flushes of lambsquarters.

Make your fall application when soil temperatures have dropped to 50 degrees F and are continuing to fall. This will help Python WDG remain stable in the soil until it activates next spring.

One more benefit that Python WDG provides is the flexibility to plant corn if market or weather conditions dictate a change. Canopy® XL herbicide restricts growers to soybeans.

When next spring arrives, you can use one 32-ounce post application of Glyphomax® Plus to clean up any remaining weeds in your Roundup Ready® soybeans. Or you can tank-mix 0.3 ounces of FirstRate® herbicide with reduced rates of Glyphomax® Plus if common and giant ragweed, cocklebur, sunflowers or velvetleaf are a common weed problem in your fields.

For more information about using Python WDG and Glyphomax® Plus herbicides in a fall-applied program, contact your local ag retailer.

Producers Fight Township Anti-Ag Ordinances

state," said a governmental affairs specialist.

Amy Van Blarcom, director of governmental affairs for PennAg Industries Association, Harrisburg, spoke about the "Co-Existence of Agriculture and Local Governments: Public Perception Versus Reality of Advanced Farming," to more than two dozen poultry and related agri-industry representatives Monday. She spoke during the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant near Manheim.

"This is a public perception issue," said Van Blarcom, who noted that the only way to solve these problems is through education. Along with education, public relations needs to come into play "before we site the facility or even before we plan," she said.

And sometimes that may not be enough. Van Blarcom spoke about a Cumberland County farmer who wanted to place a sow facility on his farm. Van Blarcom noted the producer went out of his way to contact all his neighbors and went to his township supervisors and drew up extensive plans on odor control, nutrient management, and other issues. He even hired a public relations firm. "But the community said 'no way, we don't want it,'" said Van Blarcom.

Residents voice their concerns about odor control, property value integrity, and other "economic things," she said.

Even Lancaster County itself has three townships — Pequea, Mount Joy, and East Earl — with "anti-ag ordinance activity," she noted.

Litigation fees have mounted, too. One producer is facing about $80,000 in court costs already in an attempt to gain approval to build a large-scale enterprise.

And the opposition is not just limited to poultry producers. Van Blarcom noted one site in North Heidelberg Township in Berks County, a dairy farmer that wanted to expand to 600 cows. But the township noted that it didn't like the water withdrawal issue. The township supervisors didn't want what they called "factory farms."

One poultry farm wanted to install a 9,000-bird breeder house — not a large unit by today's standards, but the township was against it.

Now, the only protection producers may have could ride on Senate Bill 1413, which came out of the House Ag Committee and is open for vote in mid-November this year. The bill, if passed, would allow the producers to recover court costs if they won.

SB 1413 is a two-way bill that would also allow townships to collect from producers if they would win.

The issue has affected judge's decisions in court, also. Back in early June, a case was heard in Fulton County, with costs exceeding $135,000. The case involves three farmers, two with swine and one with dairy, in Belfast Township, and is represented by a law firm out of Wayne.

The judge, according to Van Blarcom, noted he would have a ruling within four weeks — and as of Sept. 9, nothing was heard from him, she noted.

"The issue is a lot more intense that he imagined," she said.

The opposition is being fueled by "template"-type ordinances being drawn up through the group calling itself the Community Environmental Legal Defense Fund, which began in 1995 and operates out of Chambersburg. The group sends videotapes and leaflets to townships on a regular basis, according to Van Blarcom. The group regularly refers to large-scale operations incorrectly as "factory farms."

While noting they are "flooded with requests" from townships — about 150, according to testimony by the group's leader, Thomas Linzey, Esq., on videotape — there are about 2,800 townships in the state. The group has been funded recently with a $30,000 Heinz Foundation grant, according to Van Blarcom.

Maybe the answer, noted Van Blarcom, is to have every supervisor of every township put in a chicken house. Some industry representatives have noted that producers on a regular basis need more involvement on township boards.

U.S. Ag Secretary Veneman Addresses Farmers Union At USDA Briefing neman addressed several topics in her speech to Farmers Union members. "We continue to monitor the drought," said Veneman. "We've been very aggressive in our drought relief and expediting our emergency declarations.

"We've extended haying and grazing on CRP acres from August 31 to November 30. Today, we are announcing the opening of CRP haying and grazing on all CRP lands throughout the country," she said. Previously, emergency haying and grazing was limited to 18 states.

"I think it is important that as we move forward we ensure that drought assistance — as the President said — be offset by the money that has been allocated in the Farm Bill. Now, there are a number of proposals that are pending in which that is clearly a principle. We certainly want to work with the Congress to provide a bipartisan kind of solution to help those most in need," said Veneman.

Addressing crop insurance, she said that "this year America has record levels of land insured because of the reforms that were made as a result of the 2002 crop insurance reform. We are pleased to see that overall about 80 percent of the cropland in this country is now covered by crop insurance."

She also spoke about another issue important to the Farmers Union, the Farm Bill, noting that she was "extremely proud" of the people working on implementation.

"This first of all is a very difficult bill to implement, because it changes so much of prior law and it is also one of the shortest times in the history of farm bill where we've had a Farm Bill passed to apply to the current crop year.

"The Farm Bill continues to be an absolute top priority in our department in terms of implementation."

Veneman also discussed biosecurity to protect the nation's food supply. "This year we will provide more than $500 million in new spending for food safety, research, and plant/animal disease protections. There is a record level of funding for food safety protection programs with 7,600 inspectors. We have significant increases in plant and animal inspection programs.

"By next year we will have nearly 4,000 border inspectors — a 55 percent increase in just three years."

Veneman also announced the purchase of $30 million in pork and pork products for the school lunch and nutrition programs.

Other issues were addressed by other USDA officials. such as Keith Collins, chief economist.

The farm's share of every U.S. dollar spent on food is about 20 percent, said Collins.

Post-farm productivity is more costly, partly because processors introduce about 15,000 new food products a year. "Most fail, but those that do survive are more process- and convenience-oriented," he said, which adds to cost of production.

Collins fielded a question from a beef rancher in South Dakota who was concerned about drought-induced herd liquidation. The liquidation began in late 1995, according to Collins. Because of lack of forage, even the heifer slaughter — an indicator that there has been forced sales — has been 33-35 percent in the last two years.

Officials expected heifer slaughter to be in the low 20 percent in that time. "The increase in beef production has gone on longer than we expected and we think its weather-driven," said Collins.

Thomas Dorr, under secretary For rural development, also addressed the audience. Dorr is among several members in policy making positions in this administration that are "true farmers," he said.

In the last three months rural development has begun to process grant applications to help build and upgrade wastewater treatment facilities to help maintain commerce and ensure that rural residents have safe water, he said.

Last month, USDA released more than $700 million for water and wastewater treatment projects in 47 states.

In addition, the need to increase access technology is on their agenda, as they are attempting to make broadband technology available to rural Americans "so rural residents will have the tools needed to stimulate business," said Dorr.

Also, rural development workers are developing provisions with regard to renewable energy sources. "The President is very concerned about our dependence on foreign energy sources and wants to facilitate this country's ability to develop strategic, viable alternative energy sources," Dorr said.

Bruce Knight, NRCS chief, also a rancher from South Dakota, addressed the Farm Bill's impact on conservation efforts. The bill allocated about $13 billion for conservation — technical assistance, cost sharing, easements, and land retirement efforts. "The Farm Bill does more for working land conservation than anything we've ever experienced," said Knight.

Knight also highlighted the drought monitoring site on the Internet, http://drought.fsa.usda.gov/.

Ed Rall, deputy director, economic and policy analysis staff, Farm Service Agency, addressed the cost of the Farm Bill. Although questions were raised at the cost of the bill, the new law changes annual funding little over the last several years, he said. The bill is actually estimated to cost less than the last 4-6 years of the last Farm Bill, he said, adding that "it is clearly not a sudden increase in spending, as some claim."

Also, the media frenzy about farm support is unfounded, according to Rall, since the U.S. domestic subsidy limit is $19.1 billion, in comparison with other countries, such as the European Union's level of farm subsidy at $62 billion.

Bentzel Receives Sheep Breed Champ, Zimmerman Market Winner At Denver Fair

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

DENVER (Lancaster Co.) Beneath the red and white tent, the intermittent bleat of sheep filled the air with anticipation for 20 exhibitors of 105 sheep.

Thursday was the perfect evening, according to Bobbi Bentzel, who claimed her first grand championship in her final year of showing. The 17-year-old Manheim Central High School senior showed a Shropshire ewe that was named champion over all breeds by Judge Annette Lovell, shepherd for Holly Stone, Paoli.

"I had no idea. I wasn't expecting that much from him when I first bought him," Bentzel said. "Winning a grand champion was something I always wanted to do but didn't think possible."

She did it with Glamour — the name of the sheep originally purchased from Bobby Dinsmore, Md.

Her market lamb Glitz took the middleweight championship, but Sarah Boyd Zimmerman, Stevens, stole the spotlight once again. For the fourth year in a row, Sarah claimed the champion market lamb.

Named Havier, the lamb had been purchased from B&B in Ohio.

"I yelled at my dad when he brough him home, because I thought he picked the wrong one," Sarah said. "But the older he got, the better he looked."

This is Sarah's final year in showing. She is married to Jay Zimmerman Jr.

The reserve champion market lamb shown by Joelyn Donough is homebred. The Donoughs have 53 head on their Manheim Farm. Dexter was the first lamb born on their farm this year.

"He almost died at birth and his mother too, because his head was too big," Joelyn said.

"I didn't really like him until spring, but when we sheared him out, he really changed."

Joelyn, 15, claimed her first grand champion market lamb title in 1996 in her first year of showing.

Her brother Ryan, 18, showed a natural colored ewe named Black Ice that was named reserve champion over all ewe breeds.

Andrew's Suffolk is one of 50-60 head that is homebred on the family's Reinholds' farm.

Jen's Southdown is a bred-and-owned champion named Bubba.

"It's great to see everything finally come together," Jen said of improving the flock through breeding since 1994.

Seven breed champion ewes and rams competed for the grand champion overall.

Cheviot — Jimmy Zimmerman showed both champion and reserve ewe.

Dorset — Radell Peters showed champion and reserve ewe and ram.

Hampshire — Jen Hughes showed the champion and reserve ewe.

Horned Dorset — Jen Zimmerman showed the champion and reserve ram and ewe.

Oxford — champion and reserve ram and ewe by Joelynn Donough.

York Fair Posts Open, Junior Market Show Placings

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

YORK (York Co.) — In the open market show conducted Monday, Kelly Hain's red crossbred steer came out on top of a high quality show, according to judge Brian Kreider, Lebanon.

Kreider picked out moderately-framed steers with muscling and thickness, and Hain's steer fit the bill, followed by Jamie Welsh's Angus and Maine Anjou crossbred, which won reserve champion placing.

Hain, 20, New Freedom, got "Rudy" from a sale in northern Pennsylvania. The steer was also champion at the Mason-Dixon show. Although she has shown swine in the past, she now exhibits only beef and will soon be preparing for the upcoming Farm show after she finishes showing cattle at a handful of small county fairs.

She raised the steer on Hain Farm, a 70-acre hay, potato, and corn operation owned and operated by her mother, Lucy, and two uncles.

This year she showed three club calves, a steer and two heifers. She also came home with the champion Red Angus placing in Saturday's breeding beef show at York Fair.

Jamie Welsh and her father picked out "Montgomery," which she bought from a farm in southern Lancaster County. The steer, which took reserve champion placing at the 4-H Roundup this summer, will be sold at the fair's auction.

Welsh, a senior at Spring Grove, follows the footsteps of her brother, Tommy, who last year also had the reserve champion in the York Fair Open Steer show. They are the children of Tom and Carol Welsh, East Berlin, who farm the Welsh Ponderosa Farm family operation, a 250-acre crop farm.

Also on the farm Jamie raises dairy heifers as 4-H projects. She will also show dairy animals at the upcoming Farm Show.

The win followed a win in the junior show where Welsh was the grand champion. She has been showing cattle for seven years in the York County beef and dairy clubs. After the beef show, she planned to help show 20 head of dairy animals at the fair.

Richard Heineman, Etters, took home reserve champion placing in the junior market beef show. He not only shows cattle in more than 10 shows a year but also participates on York County's livestock judging team.

Richard is the son of Robert and Laura Heineman, Red Rock Farm, and is a junior at Red Land High School.

This is the last year for the existing barns, which will be replaced next year by a new facility large enough to hold a full-fledged rodeo and 5,500-person capacity with air conditioning and proper ventilation.

USDA Releases $323 Million For Conservation

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman today announced the availability of $323 million for the Farmland Protection Program (FPP) and the Wetlands Reserve Program (WRP) administered by the Natural Resources Conservation Service. These funds will allow NRCS to fully implement these programs in fiscal year 2002 as authorized by the 2002 Farm Bill.

These funds will help keep agricultural lands in production and they will help protect our countrys valuable wetland ecosystems, Veneman said.

Through FPP, $48 million will allow USDA to enter into agreements with organizations such as land trusts and land resource conservation councils to protect productive farmland through the purchase of conservation easements.

Ayrshires, Jerseys Compete In The Ring At Maryland Fair

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

TIMONIUM, Md. — Ayrshires and Jerseys were in the spotlight in the dairy ring at the recent Maryland State Fair.

Terry Rawn, Charleston, W.Va., judged the Ayrshire show. He has judged at 52 county and state fairs and works for Alta Genetics.

Ronnie Rider, Upton, Kentucky, judged the Jersey show. He has judged at local, state, and national levels. Rider grew up on his family's dairy farm and now owns and operates Rider Jersey Farms.

A patriotic fall calf, Burlin Stars-N-Stripes, born September 18, 2001, won junior champion honors in the Jersey show for Eric Burall, New Windsor, Maryland. A homebred animal, the calf was exhibited by his daughter, Erin Burall. She is a junior at Carroll Community College. Besides her studies, she takes care of the heifers and named Stars-N-Stripes in response to September eleventh's events.

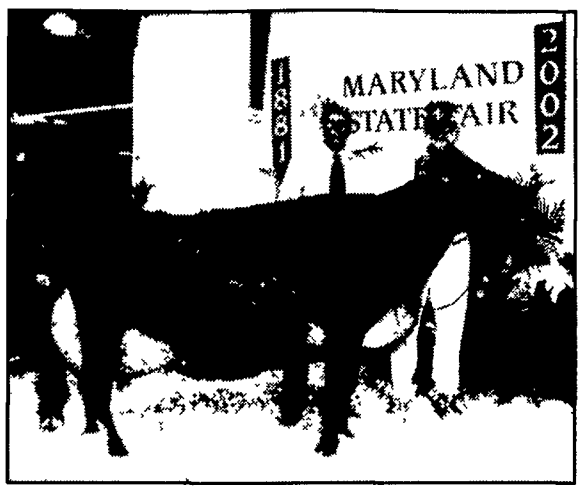
The family operates a 158-acre dairy farm and are milking 110 animals, a mix of mostly Holsteins but also Brown Swiss and Jersey animals. Stars-N-Stripes was the only Jersey animal they brought to the fair.

Also in the Jersey show, the grand champion Jersey was owned by Waverly Farms, Clear Brook, Va., Norman Nabholz, and Justin Burdette.

Representing the Ayrshire breed well, according to Rawn, was a 2-year-old animal that possessed frame and strength.

Judge Rawn picked an animal led by Mary Creek, Hagerstown, Maryland, of Palmyra Farm, for senior and grand champion Ayrshire placing. Jason Mowry, Roaring Spring, owns the reserve senior and reserve grand champion.

The junior champion in the Ayrshire show was owned by Julie DeLavergne, Hagerstown, Md. Evan Creek, Hagerstown, Md., had reserve junior champion. Creek is from Maple Dell Farm, Woodbine, Md.



Paul Stiles, Clear Brook, Va., stands with Blacky Rose of Briarcliff, the grand champion of the Jersey show. He is joined by judge Ronnie Rider.

Erin Burall's "Stars-N-Stripes," born September 18, 2001, took home junior champion honors in the Jersey show.

Livestock Show Brings Out The Best In Families

KRISTIN RUSSELL
Blair Co. Correspondent

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — There are always a number of family connections involved with the Blair County Livestock Show and this year was no exception.

Siblings Dakota and Elizabeth Biddle dominate the Blair County Livestock Baby Beef Show. The pair topped the show with grand champion and reserve grand champion honors, respectively. Their other sibling, Chris Biddle, took home third place overall placing.

However, three children of Mike and Tammy Biddle of Williamsburg made quite a showing in the baby beef division of show, with siblings winning grand, reserve grand and third place overall with their 4-H baby beef exhibits.

Ten-year-old Dakota Biddle outdid his older brother and sister when his steer, a nearly 1,200-pound Shorthorn crossbred, was named grand champion of the show. This was only Dakota's second year showing baby beef. He won the reserve grand champion title during his first year showing. Dakota is a student at the Living Waters Christian Academy.

Elizabeth Biddle, 16, had the reserve grand champion steer this year with her Maine crossbred she named "Hobie." The Biddles are particularly proud of "Hobie's" performance at the show, as he was homebred. Elizabeth will be a senior at Living Waters Christian Academy and is on track to complete her graduation requirements in just nine weeks.

Third place overall honors were given to a third Biddle sibling, Chris, age 15, for his Maine crossbred steer. When asked if they had any family secrets to their success in the baby beef shows, the Biddles' replied, "a lot of hard work."

Jeremy Mock, 11-year-old son of Jack and Peggy Mock, Williamsburg, exhibited the grand champion market lamb. Jeremy is a member of the Lamb Chops 4-H Club and this was his first time winning grand champion honors. Jeremy exhibited four lambs at the two-day competition, all Suffolk crosses, with the champion lamb weighing in at 131 pounds.

Elizabeth Biddle was the winner of the reserve grand champion rosette in the market lamb show. This was Elizabeth's eighth year showing market lambs. Her Suffolk-Hamp cross lamb "Patrick" was bred by Elizabeth herself and born on St. Patrick's Day, thus his name. After her graduation this fall, she plans to continue working with and breeding her lambs and begin doing some work in photography.

In the market goat show there was another dominate family, this time children of David and Patty Bigelow of Williamsburg. Winning grand champion with his goat "Justice" was 15-year-old David Bigelow. David is a 10th grader at Huntingdon Christian Academy. His sister Danielle, 12, had the reserve grand champion goat named "Liberty." The Bigelow family specializes in homebred Boer cross goats, with a herd of approximately 15 goats at home. The Bigelow's are members of the Kids for Kids 4-H club, where David is president and Danielle is vice-president.

Meagan Byler won grand champion of the market hog show and reserve grand champion of the carcass show. Meagan is the 14-year-old daughter of Conrad and Nancy Byler, Martinsburg. Meagan is a student at Central High School and a member of the Blair County Swine 4-H Club. This was Meagan's first grand champion win.

For reserve grand champion market hog it was Wade Pearson's 240-pound Hampshire cross. Wade is the son of Lyle and Trisha Pearson of Williamsburg. He is a member of the Blair County Swine 4-H Club and this was his first time with a champion.

In the carcass show, which was judged earlier off-site, it was Weston Rhodes, 11-year-old son of Kevin and Brenda Rhodes, Martinsburg, winning the grand champion rosette. He has been a member of the Blair County Swine Club for three years.

All-American Prepares For Another Record-Breaking Year

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — This year's All-American Dairy Show is another one for the record books.

Noting the continuation of its record-breaking growth for a third year, Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that an estimated 3,198 dairy cattle from 24 states and Canada will arrive at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg Sept. 22 to participate in the largest dairy show in the nation, the 2002 All-American Dairy Show.

"The All-American Dairy Show is one of the great agricultural expositions in North America and a spectacular showcase for the dairy industry," said Hayes. "Expositions like the All-American bring the very best of our dairy industry together."

The 3,198 entries represent an increase over the 3,077 entered in 2001 and an increase from the 2,898 entered in 2000, 2,515 in 1999, 2,427 in 1998, and 2,275 in 1997.

In addition, 24 states will be represented this year, compared to 14 states in 1999. For the second year in a row, dairy cattle from Quebec and Ontario will represent Canada at the All-American.

Accompanying the increase in the number of dairy cattle at the Pennsylvania-based dairy show is another increase in premiums for the third straight year. More than $160,000 will be offered in premiums at the 2002 All-American. Each entry will receive a cash award.

For the first time at the All-American Dairy Show, a supreme champion will be selected from the youth show. The winning youth will receive a cash premium of $2,000.

To help youth exhibitors invest in their future, each youth breed grand champion will also receive a $1,000 savings bond for their achievement.

More than $8,400 in premiums will be offered to recognize the high quality of dairy animals taking center stage during the youth classes in the Large Arena of the Farm Show Complex. This is the first year that premiums will be offered in all six youth breed shows.

Total youth premiums offered at the 2002 All-American reflect a 137 percent increase from 2001.

Open class premiums and awards have also seen major increases the last two years at the All-American Dairy Show.

Somerset County Fair's Sale Nets More Than $200,000

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — The junior livestock sale at the Somerset County Fair Aug. 24 brought in the largest recorded dollar amount ever at $214,086.35.

The sale of 367 4-H and FFA animals ended a week's worth of agricultural and entertainment activities at the Somerset County Fair in Meyersdale during the week of Aug. 18-24.

According to Mary Ann Sorber, fair board member and 4-H leader who has helped to coordinate the event for several years, this sale always proves to be a big event at the fair every year and is one of the biggest livestock sales in the state. She stressed that without the continued support of the buyers over the years, the sale wouldn't be as successful.

Somerset County auctioneers Reed Luce, Scott Mostoller, Bill Arnold, Mike Knepper, and Kermit Stahl started the sale off at 10 a.m. and ended at about 5:30 p.m.

In total, 59 steers were auctioned off for a total of $97,968.25, averaging $1.34 a piece; 73 lambs for $20,262.95, averaging $2.25 a piece; and 235 swine for $95,855.15, averaging $1.64 a piece.

Overall premier buyer was Wheeler Brothers, Somerset, who spent $28,389.45 for 20 animals. Second runner-up for premier buyer was A.J. Walker of Walkers Farm Service in Somerset. His company spent $18,226.30.

After the bidding of the lambs, Paul Wicks of Wicks Insurance of Somerset supplied an extra amount so each lamb owner received no less than $1.50 for each lamb.

The first item sold during the sale was a "Dairy Basket," full of dairy goods, gift certificates, and coupons. The basket, donated by Berlin Milling Company was bought by Laurel Highlands Animal Hospital in Somerset for $550, money donated to the 4-H Dairy Scholarship Fund.

The grand champion steer, owned by Dan Miller of Meyersdale, went to Walkers Farm Service of Somerset at $2.50 a pound, totaling $3,175. Miller also had the top county bred steer. Miller is the son of Lee and Bonnie Miller of Meyersdale. Reserve champion steer, owned by Shawn Troutman of Hyndman, also went to A.J. Walker of Walkers Farm Service in Somerset for $2 a pound, totaling $2,500.

Reserve county bred steer, owned by Forrest Ohler of Rockwood, went to Hoss's Steak and Sea House for $2 a pound, totaling $2,260. After the steers, the market lambs were brought to the auction block shortly after noon. Breann Ritchey of Hyndman sold her grand champion sheep to W.J. Brant, representing ChemGro Seeds of Rockwood, for $7.25 per pound, totaling $928. Breann is the daughter of Bobby and Karen Ritchey of Hyndman.

Lacey Murray of Garrett sold her reserve champion sheep to Wheeler Brothers for $8 a pound, totaling $1,176.

Jacob Wheeler of Somerset sold his champion county bred sheep to Wheeler Brothers for $6 a pound, totaling $798. Deidra Smith of Glencoe sold her reserve county bred sheep to Rep. Bob Bastian (R-69) of Friedens, who is also a local veterinarian, for $4 a pound, totaling $504. Gabriel Svonavec, Rockwood, sold his champion home grown sheep to Hoss's Steak and Sea House in Somerset for $5.50 a pound, totaling $687.50. Brooke Ritchey, Hyndman, sister of Breann Ritchey, sold her reserve home grown sheep to Bi-Lo grocery store in Somerset for $6, totaling $744.

The next category of swine lasted all afternoon at the fair sale with 235 pigs hitting the auction block.

Norman Coberly of Meyersdale sold his grand champion swine to Somerset Trust Company for $4.50 a pound at $1,134 total. Norman is the son of Patricia and Billy Coberly of Meyersdale.

Dara Arnold, Meyersdale, sold her reserve champion swine to Saylor Motor Company of Somerset for $3.20 a pound at $841.60 total. Becky Hittie, Berlin, sold her champion county bred swine to Mardis Motor Co. of Somerset for $3 a pound, at $747 total.

Amber Hahl, Johnstown, sold her reserve county bred swine to Siemon's Nursing Home in Somerset for $2.70 a pound, totaling $729. Rachel Sanner of Markleton sold her champion home grown swine to Ken VanBreman of VanBreman Refrigeration at $3 a pound for $780 total. Hannah Dice of Somerset sold her reserve champion home grown swine to Double S Tack Shop in Somerset at $1.40 per pound totaling $362.60.

Several animals were bought and donated to charity, including area fire departments from New Centerville, Shanksville, Addison, Confluence, Rockwood, Friedens, Listie, Acosta, Meyersdale, Berlin, Somerset, Bakersville, Salisbury, Jennerstown, and Sipesville.

The Children's Aid Home and Society of Somerset received the most donations of animals. Also, Boswell Lions Club, Stoystown Ladies Auxiliary, Meals on Wheels, Wesley Chapel Ministry, the Boy Scouts, and the 4-H Development Fund received donations.

There were also animals bought for the 4-H and FFA Scholarship Fund and then resold, adding $4,976.40 to the fund.

NFU Requests Farm Bill Hearings

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In a letter to Senate Agriculture Chairman Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, National Farmers Union has asked for committee oversight hearings to review the U.S. Department of Agriculture's farm bill implementation decisions.

"Although still in its infancy, it appears that proposed USDA rules may not achieve the goals of providing a more dependable, effective and equitable economic safety net for producers that is consistent with the intent of Congress," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "Examples and anecdotal evidence of this fact are both numerous and cut across a number of policy areas. In many cases, the intent of Congress was clearly established through floor debate and the conference record. However, USDA has already made several decisions that do not appear to reflect either congressional intent or historical precedent."

Dandie says... For Super Quality Forage this Fall and Next Spring Plant

Zorro Italian Ryegrass

➤ High Quality

➤ High Yields

You can make milk on this!

At Western Maryland Research & Education Center (by Hagerstown, MD) Zorro yielded 6773 pounds of dry matter in the spring of 2002.

Typical ryegrass silage analysis ranges
(Zorro, a tetraploid variety, will have higher energy levels and lower fiber levels):

Crude Protein	18-24%
ADF	24-28%
NDF	38-50%
NEL	.73-.78
RFV	120-160

Impressive Yield Data

In Kentucky, Zorro was the highest yielding variety in all three locations in 1999 (Lexington) and 2000 (Bowling Green and Princeton) fall plantings. The 1999 Lexington, KY trial yielded a combined fall 1999 and 2000 yield of 12,760 lbs of dry matter. From that same planting a 2001 spring harvest yielded 1,920 lbs, bringing the total yield for Zorro to 14,680 or 7.33 tons of dry matter. For complete details, see the Univ. of KY web site at:

Nitrogen Fertilizer:
50 lbs at planting (can use manure)
50 lbs March during green-up
50 lbs after ea. machine harvest or 2 grazing cycles

Fall Management:
Excessive fall growth (greater than 10 inches) should be harvested, grazed, or clipped to 4".
Silage Harvest Dates:
For super quality silage harvest when crop is 15-20 inches or in boot stage. Typical dates: Nov., Apr. 20, May 10 & 25, and mid June. Can kill off earlier for rotation crops.
Crop Rotation:
Zorro is fall and spring productive and can live up to 2 yrs. For crop rotation, Zorro should be either moldboard plowed or sprayed with a min. of 1.5 qt. of Round-up per ac. Century BMR sorghum sundangrass, Millennium BMR forage sorghum, short season silage corn, and soybeans are excellent crops to follow spring production.

Linvill Family Rebuilds After Fire Destroys Landmark Octagon Barn

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MEDIA (Delaware Co.) — Linvilla Orchards' unique octagon-shaped barn has served as a landmark for 113 years, and housed a thriving produce business for three generations.

About a week after Lancaster Farming visited this amazing farm to learn how family members work together in one of the few working farms left on the outskirts of Philadelphia, a $1.2 million fire completely destroyed the landmark barn and all its contents — business records and files, computers, offices, produce, food items, and giftware.

The fire could not have happened at a busier time — in the middle of harvesting corn, peaches, tomatoes, and other produce.

"It's a terrible emotional strain on everyone to wake up every morning and realize how much has been destroyed," said Peg Linvill, who with her husband Paul and their four children manage the farm and retail operation.

Hard work has always been a characteristic of the Linvill family, who once again are mustering the energy to carry on business as usual. They continue to offer pick-your-own peaches, corn, and other seasonal produce sold in tents erected on the grounds.

Neighboring businesses and the community have rallied around them and provided computers and office equipment. The Linvills are able to continue their bakery operation in a facility offered by another business.

"The community is marvelous. We couldn't continue without our incredible employees and the outstanding support of the community," Peg said.

Everyone feels the loss — not just us," Peg said. "Many people come and cry. They talk about how they came here ever since they were kids, and later brought their kids and now their grandchildren."

At this point the family isn't sure if they will rebuild the barn patterned after well-known Orson Fowler, an 18th century phrenologist who believed octagonal-shaped buildings were more efficient than square shapes.

The Linvills are temporarily erecting a pole barn to be opened next week in time for their annual Johnny Appleseed Arts and Crafts Festival Sept. 21-22.

Paul's father purchased the property in 1914. At that time the barn was used for cattle. Because he didn't want to milk cows every day, the elder Linvill started a produce business with a horse and wagon. People stopped by to purchase produce displayed on the front porch of the farmhouse.

Paul and two of his brothers expanded the business. Recently Paul retired — although he continues to help out — and he and Peg's four children run the operation.

Linvilla combines farming, education, entertainment, and recreation on more than 300 acres.

Linvilla is known for its outstanding displays and educational events. More than 40,000 children tour the farm in the fall through its school tour program, and 10,000 people tour daily in October.

"Actually, we are too busy to count the people during those weeks," Peg said.

"Our goal is to share the experience of a modern, working farm and remind people where their food comes from," said daughter Susan.

Linvilla is constantly changing and expanding to adapt to the needs of the community. For example, in 1970, the Linvills began a pick-your-own operation to satisfy the nostalgic back-to-nature attitude prevalent during that era. They installed a community pool, which was awarded a national prize in 1965 for being the prettiest pool. Today, two swim clubs are maintained on the farm with one swimming pool large enough for 1,000 people, and the other for 500.

Concerning the liability, Steve said, "We joke that we work for the insurance company."

His mother countered the expense by saying, "It's a valuable asset to the community. Our lives are so rich to be able to provide a lot of people with so much pleasure."

Much of the operation's success can be attributed to the Linvill family members' ability to recognize and utilize the talents of each individual family member. Susan uses her business management degree to manage the snack bar and pool. Daughter Nancy uses her art major degree and creativity as she decorates for special events such as the harvest season, the gift shop, and the Christmas shop.

Jeanne, a marketing major, manages the marketing.

Steve supervises the farming operation and unending maintenance. Norm Schultz is farm foreman.

Steve said that at one time, he believed the key to success was to specialize in one crop. "That's a plan for disaster," he said.

The Linvills grow almost everything possible and have achieved outstanding success through their pick-your-own corn, peaches, apricots, berries, sunflowers, and vegetables, open seven days a week.

"The key to success is to be open every day. We saw a great increase when we did," Steve said.

Spacious picnic grounds surround the store complex. Customers enjoy purchasing food from the deli and store to eat. An animal exhibit area is nearby.

"It is not a petting zoo. We do not encourage people to touch the animals," Steve said of recent health risks associated with petting zoos.

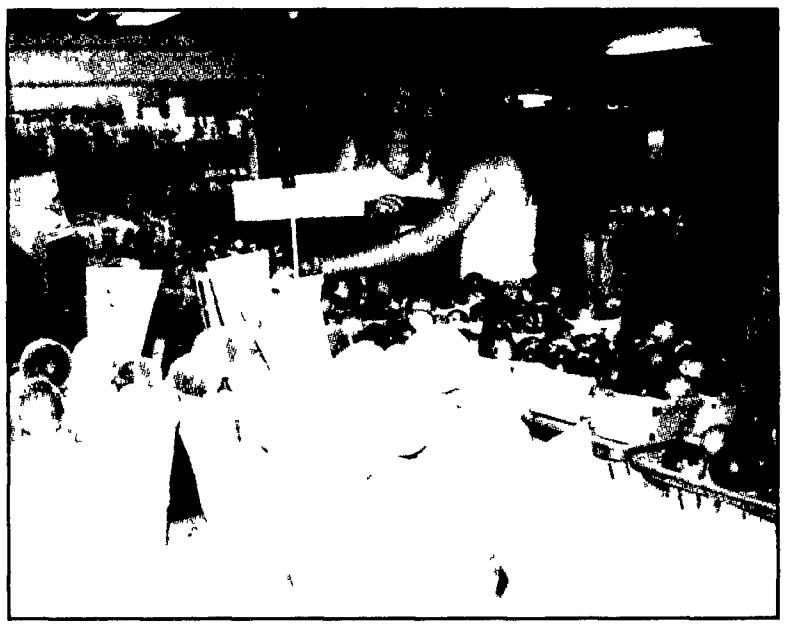
(Turn to Page B3)



In-season produce is offered in the store and through Linvilla Orchard's pick-your-own operation.

One of the labor-saving ideas is to pick corn in bins and forklift the filled bins onto the table in the store. This method saves lots of handling," Steve said.

wagons that hold 30 people each transporting people through pumpkin fields and orchards.

A corn maze is another popular recreational activity. When drought curbs corn growth in the maze, the situation is remedied by stacking straw bales to guide people through the maze.

The first year for the maze, the bales were rented from a neighboring farmer, but Steve said they found out it was more economical to grow, harvest, and sell rye. The excess that is sold pays for the bales used for entertainment events that provide seating.

Linvilla adapts to meet marketing perceptions and health issues. For example, cider was a staple made and sold on the farm until a few years ago when health risks were connected with cider. The family put customers' fears at rest by having the cider processed with ultra-violet treatment.

Before the fire, family members tried to synchronize their schedules to allow some off-time, but Peg said, "Farmers don't take days off. Since the fire, time off is definitely not happening."

About 15 years ago, the township purchased half the farm's acreage with the stipulation the land will remain under Linvilla's jurisdiction until the last Linvill sibling dies.

There are problems being surrounded by suburbia, but Peg said, "So far we have been able to work out our differences. We love what we do. It's rewarding to work with our family and the community. Our children are remarkable — but then I'm the mother."

Cornell Scientists Find Cooking Sweet Corn Fights Cancer, Heart Disease

ITHACA, N.Y. — Cooking sweet corn, whether you cream it, steam it or keep it on the cob, unleashes beneficial nutrients that can substantially reduce the chance of heart disease and cancer, according to Cornell University food scientists.

Writing in the Aug. 14 issue of Journal of Agriculture and Food Chemistry, published by the American Chemical Society, the Cornell researchers say that cooking sweet corn significantly boosts the grain's health-giving antioxidant activity.

"There is a notion that processed fruits and vegetables have a lower nutritional value than fresh produce. Those original notions seem to be false, as cooked sweet corn retains its antioxidant activity, despite the loss of vitamin C," says Rui Hai Liu, Cornell assistant professor of food science, the lead author on the article, "Processed Sweet Corn Has Higher Antioxidant Activity."

The researchers purchased sweet corn and cooked the kernels in batches at 115 degrees Celsius (239 degrees Fahrenheit) for 10, 25 and 50 minutes. Liu says that the cooking increased the antioxidants in sweet corn by 22, 44 and 53 percent, respectively. The scientists measured the antioxidants' ability to quench free radicals, which cause damage to the body from oxidation, increasing the risk of cancer and heart disease. Free radicals also have been linked to aging-related diseases like cataracts and Alzheimer's.

In addition to its antioxidant benefits, cooked sweet corn unleashes a phenolic compound called ferulic acid, which provides health benefits, such as battling cancer. "It's not a free acid," says Liu. "It's bound to the cell wall and in the corn's insoluble fibers. We found that ferulic acid was substantially increased after the sweet corn was cooked at high temperatures and by cooking it at the same temperature over a longer time."

TOUGH & NIMBLE

When Gail Waddell isn't using his AGCO ST45 compact tractor to mow grass or haul round bales on his 25-acre horse ranch he's putting it to work as owner of GTW Landscaping in Rougemont NC

"With the price of gas the way it is, I don't want to be towing a 5,000- to 7,000-pound tractor around on a trailer," he says. "That's one reason I like the AGCO compact so well. It has enough power and weight to handle heavy 3-point hitch implements; yet it's light enough to haul around on the job."

With an engine horsepower rating of 44 1 and shipping weight of more than 3 700 pounds, the ST45 is the heavyweight powerhouse of compact tractors To learn more about the productivity reliability and operator comfort that only an AGCO ST series tractors can provide stop by and see us today

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

An era is about to end.

History will crumble into piles of aged, dry splinters and crumbly roofing when demolition gets under way this week at our York fairgrounds. Slated for flattening by bulldozers and excavators are the familiar, yellow-painted livestock barns, long a fixture of our historic fair.

Our family has a lot of roots still sunk into the ground around that row of livestock barns, primarily at the southwest corner of Barn 8. For at least 25 years, that location was home-away-from-home for our cattle, our kids and truckloads of all the gear needed to fit and exhibit a dairy showstring.

Just as happened at the homes of numerous exhibitors during the last several days, we would gather show boxes, halters, milking equipment, fitting and grooming gear, washing supplies, sleeping cots, bales of hay and straw, bags of feed and other stuff too numerous to list and pile it into pickup, trailer and family vehicles. Down from the attic came the cattle signs, food coolers, water containers, sleeping bags. For several days, we lived split lives, divided between chores at home and chores at the fairgrounds. Our kids generally camped there for a couple of days, until the competitions were over and they had to return to school.

The humble little room on the corner of the barn served as feed room, sleeping quarters, changing facilities, and supply center. One stall was generally kept empty of cattle to use as a "social" center of our display, complete with folding camp table, picnic cooler, cold drinks, coffee pot, lawn chairs. Inevitably the area was cluttered with a couple of stale, leftover doughnuts, fast food cups, camera, napkins, show catalogs.

Within a few hours of moving in, dust covered everything, as we sweated in the late summer heat. And, in years when the weather turned during the fair week, as often happens, everything everything turned somewhat damp and soggy. And chilly.

When the kids left home, we bowed out of showing cattle. Dairy friends began occupying that same stretch of stalls. Some of their early show animals had ancestry in our herd, so we still felt ties to that particular corner of the fairgrounds.

So it is with much nostalgia and a little sadness that we will bid goodbye to a part of our family's history when those old, yellow barns collapse under progress.

"Isn't there something the public could do to stop it? Couldn't they be remodeled?" has asked more than one person I've talked with in recent days, lamenting the planned demolition of a part of York County's history.

Maybe. But probably not.

In reality, as much as those barns are a part of our family, part of me was always a little afraid of them as potential firetraps for livestock. And possibly people. I couldn't begin to relate how many times we blew out fuses in the ancient, fading electrical systems in the barns. Even upgrading and repairing was mere stopgap measures to a system designed long before most of us had high-pressure washers for cattle, and hooked in powerstrips with everything from cattle clippers, fans and high-output livestock hairdryers to boom boxes and CD players blasting out music.

Had a fire ever started in one of the tinder-dry barns, with cattle buried belly-deep in dry sawdust, straw and hay, subject to often brisk winds blowing across the expanse of ground, cows tied into the stalls may not have stood a chance. And exhibitors would surely have endangered themselves trying to rescue prized stock.

Leaky roofs, outdated plumbing, aging timbers, mounting insurance premiums and repair costs way beyond the value of structures used only a few weeks of the year equate to making restoration a costly, impractical solution. And while it lacks the history, the romanticism, the scenic nostalgia of the old barns, a new, safer, more practical, metal, multipurpose structure is not only a more workable business solution, it just makes good, common sense.

All that said...we'll still miss 'em.

Farewell, York Fair livestock barns. Thanks for the memories.

Guess which vegetable is most frequently consumed in the United States?

If you guessed carrots you guessed right!

Carrots are packed with Beta carotene, Vitamin A, and all the other good things that Mother said were good for you. Remember the saying, "If you eat your carrots, you'll have good eyesight — especially at night. In addition, beta carotene may reduce the risk of heart disease and some forms of cancer.

Fortunately heat does not destroy beta carotene in carrots. In fact light cooking helps the body to absorb this healthful element. In addition, carrots supply some vitamin C, fiber, potassium and other minerals. Good news too, is that three and a half ounces of carrots contain only 42 calories raw, and 31 calories cooked and drained.

In recent years, carrot production soared, partly because of the baby-carrot boom. Baby carrots are not really small immature carrots but the finger size veggies are regular carrots that have been peeled, cut, polished and bagged in appropriate sizes for singles or families.

When selecting fresh carrots, choose top quality carrots that feel firm, are smooth, clean, well shaped and have bright reddish-orange color. If sold with the tops on, choose carrots with fresh-looking deep green feathery leaves. Do not buy wilted, soft, pale, cracked rough or shriveled carrots.

Some people say that the mature carrots are often sweeter in flavor and other people claim that the smaller carrots are more tender and sweet. We do know that mature carrots contain more beta carotene that then the younger ones.

Always store carrots (tops removed) in plastic bags in the refrigerator.

Prepare carrots immediately before using. The young carrots need only a good brush-scrubbing and rinsing while the older larger carrots should be pared with a vegetable peeler.

Boiling time depends on the size, age and cut with whole mature carrots cooking for 10-15 minutes, whole baby carrots 8-10 minutes and cut, sliced or shredded carrots 4-10 minutes. Allow 35 minutes for whole baked carrots.

But even though consumers tend to eat carrots as a snack with dips, the vegetable is less frequently chosen to accompany an entre at a dinner. Family members might say that cooked carrots are boring, if served the same way and will rebel at a steady diet of cooked carrots.

Use your imagination and think about different ways to serve this versatile inexpensive vegetable that is available year round. Chefs often will combine carrots with other vegetables in unique imaginative ways because of their vivid color, crisp texture, appealing sweet flavor and nutritional value. Take a look at ethnic cookbooks and you'll find carrots being used in many cultures in hors d'oeuvres, soups, stews, muffins, breads, main entrees and cakes. So, yield to your imagination and choose healthy affordable carrots with planning your next meal.

For Tea Lovers: White Tea

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — "White tea" does not refer to black tea with milk, but rather a specific form of tea in which the leaves and buds are simply steamed and dried.

It is the least processed of all forms of tea. Black, green, and oolong teas are withered before various degrees of oxidation.

The highest quality of white teas are picked before the leaf buds have opened, while still covered with silky white hairs, which imparts a white to light gray color of tea leaves.

White tea brews to a pale yellow to light red color. It has a fresh, slightly sweet flavor.

White tea has about the same amount of caffeine as green or black teas, however the amount varies with the brand of tea.

While tea should be steeped in water well below boiling, about 180 degrees F. Place 1-2 teaspoons of leaves in your cup and let the tea steep for 3-5 minutes. Do not remove the leaves from the cup; instead sip the tea until the water level is low, and then add more hot water. You can repeat this process until the tea flavor is exhausted. The addition of milk or sugar will mask the delicate characteristics of this tea and is therefore not recommended.

White tea is expensive and can be found in specialty stores. The two most popular white teas are Silver Needle and White Peony (also called Pai Mu Tan or Bai Mudan); however, other varieties are available.

Featured Recipe

For centuries, rice has been a mainstay for millions of people around the world. From Indian curries, to Japanese sushi, to Spanish paella, or Italian risotto, the popularity of rice has no boundaries.

Today, as American interest in ethnic cuisine soars, and consumers become increasingly food-savvy, consumption of rice continues to rise. At a record 27.1 pounds per capita, rice consumption has increased nearly 30 percent since 1988, and more than doubled in the past 20 years.

Here's a look at some of the most popular rices both old and new favorites and the best ways to use them:

• Long grain rice has a long, slender kernel four to five times longer than its width. Cooked grains are separate, fluffy, and light. Long grain rice works well in entres, soups and side dishes.

• Medium grain rice is somewhat shorter, with a kernel two to three times longer than its width. Cooked grains are moist and tender, and have a greater tendency to cling together. Medium grain rice is ideal in recipes requiring a creamy consistency, and is frequently the rice of choice for puddings, custards or meat loaves.

• Short grain rice has a short, round kernel, with grains that are soft and cling together when cooked. Often used in sushi, short grain rice is also great for desserts, rice pancakes and molded side dishes.

• Parboiled rice is soaked, steamed, dried and then milled to remove the outer hull, which results in cooked grains that are extra fluffy and separate. It also retains more nutrients than regular-milled rice. Parboiled rice is often used in entres, soups, side dishes and pilafs.

• Brown rice has the outer hull removed but retains the bran layers that give it a distinctive tan color and nutty flavor. The bran layers are rich in vitamins and minerals. Breakfast cereals, vegetarian dishes and hearty salads all are perfect for brown rice.

• A favorite is risotto, U.S. arborio is a medium-grain rice recognized by a characteristic white dot in its center. When cooked, it develops a creamy texture and has an exceptional ability to absorb flavors.

• U.S. basmati and jasmine are both long grain rices with a distinctive aroma similar to that of popcorn or roasted nuts. Cooking basmati rice results in long, slender grains that remain dry, fluffy and separate, while cooked jasmine rice grains are soft, moist and cling together. Basmati and jasmine are both perfect choices for Asian-style dishes, like curries and stir-fries.

• Two colorful "newcomers" have quickly become favorites with adventurous cooks. U.S. aromatic red rice is known by its honey-red bran layer and savory, nutty flavor. Minimally processed, its grains are slightly chewy. Use it where a robust flavor is desired, such as in stews or as an accompaniment to roasted meats. The dark black color and spicy sweetness of U.S. black Japonica rice is showing up on more menus every day. Like brown rice, it is minimally processed to retain its bran layers, and is a perfect complement to hearty meat dishes, duck and wild game.

Preparing rice is easy. American-grown rice is a clean product that does not need washing or rinsing before using. In fact, rinsing can remove some of the vitamins in enriched rice.

Simply combine rice with the amount of liquid, salt, and seasonings required according to recipe. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat; cover and simmer until done.

For creative rice recipe "ideas" or additional information about rice, visit the Have a Rice Day Cafe Web site at www.ricecafe.com. Here is one of the recipes from the U.S.A. Rice Council.

1 pound dry black beans, sorted and rinsed
1 (14-½-ounce) can whole tomatoes, undrained
1 cup sliced celery
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 smoked ham hock or ham bone
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon ground red pepper
½ teaspoon thyme leaves
4 cups low-sodium chicken broth
4 cups water
Salt and ground black pepper to taste
4 cups hot cooked rice
½ cup (2 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese
½ cup sour cream
½ cup picante sauce

Cover beans with water; soak overnight. Drain beans and place in large saucepan or Dutch oven. Add tomatoes with juice, celery, onion, green pepper, ham hock, garlic, bay leaf, red pepper, thyme, chicken broth and water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, partially covered, 4 to 5 hours or until beans are tender; stir occasionally. Add more water if necessary during simmering. Remove and discard bay leaf. Remove ham hock and cut meat off bone; return meat to beans. Puree half of soup in blender or food processor; return to pan. Season soup with salt and black pepper. Serve soup with rice, cheese, sour cream and picante sauce.

Makes 8 servings.

Pickle Problems

Crisp pickled cucumbers provide interest to meals. Your favorites may be brined or fermented pickles that go through a lengthy curing process. Changes occur in the color, flavor, and texture as the food sets in the brine or is fermented. Or you may prefer to make fresh pack or quick process pickles that are covered with boiling hot vinegar, spices, and seasonings because they are so easy to make.

Sometimes these pickles may be brined for several hours and then drained before being covered with the pickling solution. Fresh pack pickles taste better if allowed to develop flavor for several weeks after they are sealed in the jars. Even after selecting quality produce and following canning directions, problems can result in the end product.

The following are some common pickle problems:

• The garlic cloves used in pickles turns green or bluish green. What causes this? This may be a chemical reaction of iron, tin, or aluminum in cookware, water, or water pipes reacting with the pigments in the garlic. Another possibility is the garlic may naturally have more bluish pigment and it shows up more after pickling. Immature garlic bulbs should be cured two to four weeks at 70 degrees F before being used.

Although the color of the garlic doesn't look nice, the pickles are safe to eat.

• Can burpless cucumbers be used for pickling? They are not suitable for fermented pickles because they produce an enzyme when mature that causes the pickles to soften during fermentation. Smaller burpless cucumbers with small seeds may be suitable for making fresh pack pickles. The skins on burpless cucumbers may be tough.

• Can I use dill seed in place of fresh dill? Try one or two tablespoons dill seed for the usual three heads of fresh dill for each quart of pickles.

• What causes pickles to be hollow? The cucumbers may be picked too long before brining, be too large for brining, or have grown hollow on the plant. Use smaller cucumbers and begin the pickling process within 24 hours after gathering. You can identify hollow cucumbers because they usually float when washed. Adequate brine strength and volume is needed for proper curing to prevent hollowness.

• What causes soft, slippery pickles? A weak brine, high temperatures, improper processing, mold, and enzymes. Follow a tested recipe for adequate concentration of salt.

Use vinegar of 5 percent acidity. Store cucumbers between 70 and 75 degrees F. for optimum temperature to encourage growth of the organisms necessary for fermentation. Keep cucumbers covered with the brine. Process in a boiling water canner. Use fresh spices and properly cured garlic to avoid mold. Always cut ⅛ inch off the blossom end to remove enzymes that cause softening. If spoilage is evident, do not eat soft or slippery pickles.

• What causes shriveled pickles? Too much salt, too heavy a syrup (sugar), or vinegar that is stronger than 5 percent acidity cause shriveling. Older pickles and dry weather pickles will also shrivel. Overcooking and over-processing are other causes of shriveling.

• Why do some pickles have a strong, bitter taste? Too many spices may have been used, or the spices may have cooked too long in the syrup. Avoid using salt substitutes because they usually contain potassium chloride which is naturally bitter. Dry weather produces a bitter taste in the cucumber-this is usually in the green peel.

• What causes scum on the brine surfaces while the cucumbers are brining? Some types of wild yeasts, molds, and bacteria feed on the acid in the pickling solution and reduce its concentration. Remove scum as often as needed.

• What causes white sediment in a crock or jar of pickles? Bacteria causes sediment during fermentation. The anti-caking agent in table salt can also cause sediment. Use of canning or pickling salt prevents this problem.

• What causes dark or discolored pickles? Reactions occur with the minerals in hard water and in iodized salt. Ground spices tend to darken pickles. Sometimes the spices in the pickle resting against the cucumber discolor the area of contact. Spices can be placed loosely in a cheese cloth bag so that they can be removed before canning.

However, check that enough flavor is imparted in the brine before removing spice bag. Brass, iron, copper or zinc utensils should not be used in pickle making because they cause color problems and chemical reactions.

• Why did the liquid in my dill pickles turn pink? Over-mature dill may be the cause — the product is still safe to use. Another reason may be yeast growth. If yeast is present, the pickles should be discarded.

Three Steps To Lowering Ovarian Cancer Risk

September Is Ovarian Cancer Awareness Month

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Constantly in breast cancer's shadow, ovarian cancer is not as commonly discussed or diagnosed, yet remains the fourth most frequent cause of cancer related death among American women.

Rarely caught early, the disease may not be detected until it has caused many symptoms and in some cases spread beyond the ovaries to other organs such as the liver, stomach, intestines, bladder, diaphragm, lungs or chest cavity. In all, ovarian cancer sneaks up on one out of every 55 women in the U.S., killing one every 35 minutes. In about the time it takes to drink your morning coffee, another woman has died.

Recent studies illustrate bold advances in treatment. In a study published in Gynecologic Oncology by doctors at the Women's Cancer Centers of California, hope was renewed for women in advanced stages of the disease. The study showed that if all visible signs of the cancer are removed via cyto-reductive surgery before chemotherapy is performed, survival rates can improve drastically. In addition, advanced chemotherapies are working to prevent cancer recurrence as well as improve current treatment models.

"We're certainly finding ways to improve ovarian cancer treatment, but until we find a cure, women and their doctors need to become better educated," says Scott Eisenkop, M.D., medical director of the Women's Cancer Center, at Encino Tarzana Regional Hospital, CA, who headed the study. "Women and primary care physicians need to be aware of and recognize the symptoms and to quickly involve a specialist."

Luckily, there are steps women can take which may decrease their chances of becoming an ovarian cancer statistic.

Get an annual Vaginal/Rectal Exam

Kathy Casey, M.D., a gynecological oncologist at the Women's Cancer Centers, said "The myth that a yearly pelvic and rectal exam is only necessary during the reproductive years is absolutely false.

Especially for post-menopausal women who are more likely to get epithelial ovarian cancer, regular consultation with your gynecologist is one of the best ways to keep an eye on this disease."

Testing for ovarian cancer is normally not routine at most OB-GYN check-ups. Preferred tests may include blood tests, ultrasounds (transvaginal sonography) and physical examinations of the vagina and rectum to detect tenderness and abnormal swelling. However, the only way currently to definitively diagnose ovarian cancer is through minimally invasive surgery involving minor tissue removal.

Learn The Symptoms

While breast cancer may be found with regular exams at home, detecting ovarian cancer is more difficult. Since few women are aware of its subtle signs, the ratio of deaths to new cases for ovarian cancer is an alarming 71 percent, while it is only 27 percent for breast cancer.

Ovarian cancer's symptoms may include:

• Pelvic and/or abdominal pain, discomfort, swelling, bloating, and/or feeling of fullness

• Pain during intercourse

• Unexplained changes in bowel habits

• Frequency and/or urgency of urination in absence of an infection

• Vague, but persistent gastrointestinal upsets such as gas, nausea and indigestion

• Unexplained weight gain or loss, particularly weight gain in the abdominal region

• Ongoing fatigue

• Abnormal postmenopausal bleeding (this symptom is rare)

"Tragically, many ovarian cancer symptoms are often ignored or misdiagnosed as menopause, benign, gynecological or gastrointestinal problems," said Maxine Stein, executive director of the National Ovarian Cancer Coalition. "Trust your instincts. If you sense something is wrong, if you have a family history of the disease or you feel more than a minor irritation or persistent symptoms, insist on seeing a gynecological oncologist."

Get A Referral

The most qualified specialist is a gynecological oncologist. According to a recent study, part of the problem in detecting ovarian cancer is that many general medical professionals admit to not feeling up to date on the cancer or its symptoms.

'Ovarian cancer is where breast cancer was 20 years ago before women took it upon themselves to do home self breast exams," says Dr. Casey. "With a little education, we can bridge those years quickly while we work towards a cure."

CORRECTION — A recipe had been printed for Fern Freeman, Elliotsburg, several weeks ago. Sorry, but L.L. forgot to include the amount of flour. Here is the corrected recipe.

Black Olive Bread

3 cups bread flour
2 teaspoons active dry yeast
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped black olives
3 tablespoons olive oil
1¼ cups warm water (110-degrees)
1 tablespoon cornmeal

In a large bowl, mix together flour, yeast, sugar, salt, black olives, olive oil, and water. Turn out dough on a floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic, 5-10 minutes. Set aside, and let rise about 45 minutes, until it doubles in size. Punch down. Knead well again, about 5-10 minutes. Let rise for about 30 minutes, until it doubles in size. Round the dough on a kneading board. Place upside down in a bowl lined with a lint-free, well-floured towel. Let rise until doubled in size.

While the bread is rising for the third time, put a pan of water in the bottom of the oven. Preheat oven to 500 degrees. Gently turn loaf onto a sheet pan that has been lightly oiled and dusted with cornmeal.

Bake loaf at 500 degrees for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 375 degrees. Bake 30 minutes or until done.

ANSWER — Wayne Erb, Mount Joy, wanted a recipe to make French fries at home for freezing. Thanks to Mrs. Nathan L. Wadel, Chambersburg, for sending a recipe she received from a home economist several years ago. She writes that French-fried potatoes frozen at home do not have quite the flavor and quality that commercially frozen fries do because commercial freezing uses a flash freezing process that cannot be duplicated in home freezers.

French Fries

Prepare potatoes for French frying. Fry briefly in deep fat until barely golden. Remove from fat, drain well, and spread on cookie sheet taking care not to have potatoes touching. Freeze on cookie sheet in a single layer without covering. When frozen, place in plastic freezer bag, force out air, and tie securely.

Prepare for serving as you would commercially frozen French fries.

ANSWER — Evelyn Smith, Duncannon, requested a recipe for orange creamsicle fudge. Thanks to Pam Mummert, Glen Rock, for sending her recipe.

Orange Creamsicle Fudge

¾ cup plus 1½ teaspoons butter (no substitutes) divided
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup cream
10-12-ounce package vanilla or white chips
7-ounce jar marshmallow creme
3 teaspoons orange extract
12 drops yellow food coloring
5 drops red food coloring

Grease a 9x13-inch pan with 1½ teaspoon butter. In a heavy saucepan, combine sugar, cream, and remaining butter. Cook and stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil; cook and stir four minutes. Remove from heat; stir in white chips and marshmallow creme until smooth.

Remove one cup mixture and set aside. Add orange extract and food colorings to remaining mixture; stir until blended.

Pour into prepared pan. Drop reserved marshmallow mixture by tablespoonfuls over top; cut through mixture with a knife to swirl. Cover and refrigerate until set. Cut into squares. Yields: 2½ pounds.

Weigh All Factors To Determine Fat

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Can it be true that fried chicken has only slightly more fat than roasted chicken?

Ounce for ounce, that might be true — depending on what your definition of "slightly" is. But as usual, the answer is a bit more complicated than you might think. Let's take a look at the numbers and start there.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Nutrient Database (http://www.nal.usda.gov/fnic/cgi-bin/nut—search.pl), 100 grams, or about 3.5 ounces, of roasted chicken meat contains 190 calories and 7.4 grams of fat. The same amount of battered fried chicken meat contains 219 calories and 9.1 grams of fat.

That additional fat might not seem like much. However, that's if you eat just the meat. If you eat the skin, too, you've got a different story. In that case, 100 grams of roasted chicken contains 239 calories and 13.6 grams of fat. The same amount of fried chicken contains 289 calories and 17.4 grams of fat. (Now you know why weight-loss programs counsel participants to eat skinless chicken).

Still, there's another complication to take into account. When you batter and fry chicken, you add weight to each piece of chicken normally consumed. To take this into account, the USDA's Nutrient Database averages the weights of "units," or pieces, from one-pound ready-to-cook chickens, and then compares the fat and calories for each unit. The results may surprise you.

The average unit of meat from roasted chicken weighs in at 146 grams, contains 277 calories and 10.8 grams of fat. The average unit of meat from fried chicken weighs 155 grams, contains 339 calories and 14.1 grams of fat. Are those differences still "slight" in your mind?

Now let's compare those numbers for chicken with skin. The average unit of meat with skin from roasted chicken weighs 178 grams, contains 335 calories and 19 grams of fat. But here's the kicker: The average unit of battered, fried chicken with skin weighs 280 grams, contains 809 calories and 48.6 grams of fat. That kind of difference is hard to overlook.

The bottom line: The battered skin on fried chicken skin adds quite a bit of weight to the piece of chicken, and could add quite a bit of weight to your hips as well.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Recently, I've been reading papers telling about all the discoveries during the last 50 years. There have been many inventions that lighten our work load. Washing machines are a big help to housewives. And, so are dryers and dishwashers. Although, many an important conversation can be held over doing dishes with a family member.

Even what we do on Sunday has changed. Not everyone reserves Sunday for church services. No longer do people visit relatives and friends on a Sunday afternoon. Rather we read the Sunday newspaper or take a nap.

It is a pleasant experience to have someone phone or simply drop in to visit. Farmers always have something to talk about. Maybe it is the weather or their animals. Long ago we did not tell people that we were coming — we simply stopped by. There were grandparents, uncles, aunts, and cousins to visit regularly.

My grandfather had a radio with head phones and it was a privilege to use them. Only one person could listen at one time and it was very special to hear people's voices.

Older folks have trouble adjusting to today's prices too. No longer does a three-cent stamp mail a letter or 10 cents buy a loaf of bread. But we must remember that people no longer work 44 hours for $15. That is what I was paid in 1940. Clothes were also much less expensive at that time.

My husband's medical bills are out of this world — so to speak. And, we can be so very thankful for health insurance.

Bean Equivalents

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — To interchange dried and canned, follow these guidelines:

Depending on the variety, a 15- to 16-ounce can of cooked beans measures about 1¾ cups of beans and equals ½ cup dry beans.

One pound of dry beans measures approximately 2 cups dry or 6 cups cooked beans. Dry beans triple in volume when soaked and cooked.

Stream MAPS

LOST STREAM MAP

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every angler and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into...there's a sure way to up your odds...simply try new fishing waters. Now, with this map you can find hidden streams and lakes.

Pennsylvania, New York, New England, New Jersey, Ohio and Maryland/Delaware are loaded with great fishing holes...many of them overlooked. Thousands of miles of streams, rivers and lakes are now easy-to-locate on one map.

The 3-foot-by-5-foot Pennsylvania map shows 45,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3 1/2-foot-by-4 1/2-foot New York map shows 65,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3-foot-by-4-foot New England map shows 36,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 2 1/2-foot-by-3-foot New Jersey map shows 8,300 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3-foot-by-3-foot Ohio Map shows 29,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 2-foot-by-3 1/2-foot Maryland/Delaware map shows 12,000 miles of streams plus lakes.

Professor Higbee's' Stream Maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind.

Kids Play 'Farmer For A Day'

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

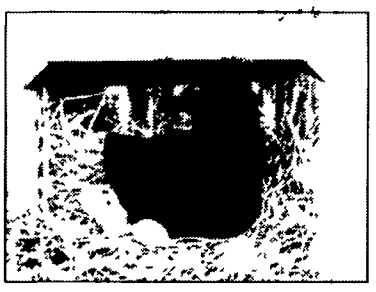
HARFORD (Susquehanna Co.) — At some point in their lives, many kids think they might like to be a farmer.

Kids visiting the Harford Fair in Susquehanna County can get a little hands-on experience on harvesting at one of the fair's most popular spots for young visitors, the "Farmer For A Day" display.

"Farmer For A Day" is a free, educational display set up in a corner of one of the fair's livestock barns on the Harford fairgrounds, during the fair's annual week-long run in late August. While the entrance door for admittance is designed to be just high enough for little fairgoers, adults have been known to sneak through the low entryway to try their hands at farming.

Madeline Mitchell, Montrose, practices her milking technique on the display cow in the Harford Fair's "Farmer For A Day" activity.

Gathering eggs, even if they are plastic, is a favorite part of the hands-on farm education booth for 6-year-old Rebekah Camacho.



Velour chickens never peck at little hands and always have eggs tucked under their soft bodies for gathering in a basket kept handy for visitors.

Greeting visitors first is a large cow, complete with milking udder, and a tail with a real cow switch. It is not a real cow, but a slightly smaller-than-life version of a Holstein, complete with teats made from calf bottle nipples. The cow is carved from basswood and was created by fair director Frank Supancik. He added a wooden udder with an epoxy-lined section in the center to hold the "milk," which is actually a little milk diluted with a lot of water.

By grasping the "teats" and squeezing with their hands, just as if they were milking a real cow, visitors can see and feel what the milking process is about. And because the cow is wooden — and doesn't ever kick — no one has to worry about ever getting bumped or hurt, as they might if a real cow was surprised or scared. After they have finished their try at milking, kids can dump the "milk" into a real milk can set nearby.

With their milking chores finished, kids move on to gather eggs from a few nest boxes set up on display. About a dozen plastic eggs are available for gathering in a basket kept handy just for the job. The eggs are tucked under an adorable, realistic stuffed hen in each nest, designed from a soft, plushy velour fabric, complete with eyes and beaks. They never peck anyone and stay at their job of providing eggs as long as necessary.

The chickens were designed by Frank's wife, Betsy, who helps to organize and work in the booth each year, along with many other volunteers including 4-H'ers, dairy maids and families with cattle on display in the surrounding livestock barns. She designed the chickens after a pattern found in a learn-to-draw farm animals, and had to stuff them a couple of times before she was completely happy with the real-looking results.

With the cow milked and the eggs gathered, it is time for little farmers to move on to the potato patch. Set up in a mini-field of sand, the potato patch has fake foliage on the top, but there are lots of real potatoes buried underneath in the sand for small fingers to find.

Completing the farming display is a garden, with both real and imitation plants including tomatoes, lettuce, carrots, celery, cabbage, strawberries, green peppers and some cheery, red geraniums for bright color. The garden demonstrates how these popular fresh produce items are grown.

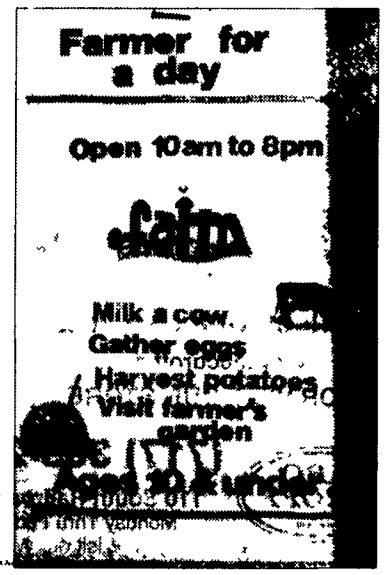
"When they find a potato, they are surprised," said young volunteer Kenny Kiefer, who enjoys watching the children find the buried treasures and then re-buries them quickly before the next wave of potato diggers arrives.

The display is so loved by the children that many go through a couple of times a day during their visits to the fair. Before they leave, children are treated to cartons of milk, donated by Dairylea Milk Cooperative.

In addition to keeping the cow filled with milk and eggs nestled under hens, Betsy Supancik raises many of the vegetable plants used in the display. She grows them in pots at their home, then brings them to the fair to bury in sand for forming the booth's garden.

The August fair was the third year for the popular kids' display on farming, which is sponsored free by the Harford Fair board. In its first year, the display featured an apple tree, chickens, and the potato patch. The hand-carved cow and expanded garden are more recent additions.

"We recommend it for children age 10 and under," says Betsy. "But we've had some college kids go through it already."



"Farmer For A Day" sign marks one of the Harford Fair's favorite displays for youngsters — and sometimes for older kids as well.

Re-burying potatoes in the potato patch, a plot filled with sand, is volunteer Kenny Kiefer, 11. He likes to explain to visitors about how the potatoes they find grow underground.

County Princesses Gather For Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Pageant

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. plans its 46th Annual Dairy Princess Pageant to be conducted Saturday evening, September 21, at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center. A milk punch reception will start at 5:30 p.m. followed by a banquet at 6:30 p.m. and the coronation at 8:00 p.m.

Thirty-six county dairy princesses will compete for the title of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess now held by Becky Mowrer of Huntingdon County. The newly selected princess and two alternates will reign for a period of one year from September 2002 to September 2003. During that time, they will represent the dairy farmers of Pennsylvania speaking out for its number one agricultural industry and all dairy products.

The pageant, which will be held on the Saturday evening preceding the annual All-American Dairy Week, will end two full days of activities and interviews for the contestants. The contestants are judged on a personnel interview, a 3-5 minute speech for an adult audience, a 3-5 minutes school presentation and a scrapbook. Four judges, two men and two women, all from out-of-state, will select seven finalists who will answer an impromptu question on stage. The judges will then select the 2002 Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and two Alternates from the finalists.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Princess program is supported by Pennsylvania dairy farmers through their various advertising and promotion agencies: The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program/American Dairy Association Mid East, Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association, American Dairy Association Dairy Council, Inc. and Allied Milk Producers.

In addition contributions from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and other dairy related organizations and individuals. This year, Select Sire Power, Inc. is sponsoring the $1,200 award to the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess. Awards of $600 each will be given to the two alternates.

In addition, two contestants will receive $100 awards for outstanding dairy presentations designed for school children and, two contestants will receive $100 each for the two best speeches designed for adult audiences. There will also be two $100 awards for compiling the best scrapbooks, which chronicle their Dairy Princess activities to date. The scrapbook award is being sponsored by ABS Global. The contestants themselves will select the coveted "Miss Congeniality" award from among their own ranks.

For more than 45 years, the primary purpose of the Dairy Princess program in Pennsylvania is the promotion of the dairy industry and its products on the local grass roots level and furthering consumers understanding of the importance of agriculture to our state's economy. Incentive awards will again be given to the counties whose last year's princess and her committee completed the incentive requirements.

In addition, an individual award of $300 will be given to the young woman who stood out as the outstanding dairy promoter during her county reign. This award, entitled the "Tina Shultz Memorial Award" is given in memory and honor of the outstanding young lady, who in May 1986 succumbed to cancer, during her reign as Huntingdon County Dairy Princess.

The Saturday morning presentation competition will be open to the public free of charge. It will run from 8 a.m. until noon in the Radisson Ballroom.Tickets for the event are $30 per person (over 11 years old) and $15 per person (3-10 years old); under 2 years old are free.

Quick Tips To Packing A Safe Lunch

It's back to school time again and the Partnership for Food Safety Education is offering tips to remind parents and families the importance of packing a safe lunch.

There is a lot of talk about food safety and children are at a greater risk of becoming ill. Without a plan to prevent a foodborne illness, "brown bag" lunches are often kept at room temperature for more than two hours, and this alone increases a child's risk for becoming sick.

The general rules for packing a safe lunch are to keep it clean, to keep hot foods hot, and to keep cold foods cold. Following these rules will reduce your child's risk of a foodborne illness. For more information see the tips below.

Tip 1: Always keep it clean. Make sure your hands and food preparation surfaces and utensils are clean. Use hot, soapy water to effectively get rid of bacteria. Teach your children to wash their hands before they eat. Also wash fruits and vegetables before packing them in your child's lunch.

Tip 2: Be sure to keep hot foods such as soup, chili, or stew hot by using an insulated bottle. Fill the bottle with boiling water and let it stand for a few minutes. Empty the bottle and then fill it with piping hot food. Keep the bottle closed until lunchtime. Don't save leftovers.

Tip 3: Cold food should stay cold, so invest in a freezer gel pack (available in supermarkets and kitchen supply stores) and an insulated lunch bag or box. Freezer gel packs will keep foods cold until lunchtime, but are not recommended for all day storage. Any perishable food (such as meat, poultry, eggs, milk, and food made from any of these ingredients) not eaten at lunch should be discarded.

Tip 4: If your child chooses a brown paper bag to carry lunch, it is especially important to include a cold source. A freezer gel pack or a frozen sandwich works well. Because brown bags tend to become soggy or leak as cold foods thaw, be sure to use and extra paper bag to create a double layer. Double bagging will also help insulate the food better.

Tip 5: Tell your child to use the refrigerator at school, if one is available. If not, make sure they keep their lunch out of direct sunlight and away from radiators, baseboards and other heat sources found in the classroom.

Tip 6: Every parent should have a supply of shelf-stable foods for easy packing. These include fresh fruits and vegetables, crackers, peanut butter sandwiches, packaged pudding and canned fruits or meats.

Tip 7: Freeze single juice packs overnight and place the frozen drink in your child's lunch. The juice will thaw by lunchtime, but it will still be cold. The frozen drink will also keep the rest of the lunch cold.

Tip 8: If you make sandwiches or pack lunches the night before, keep the perishable food in the refrigerator until right before your children leave the house.

Use these tips to help prevent your child from coming down with a foodborne illness and its uncomfortable symptoms, including vomiting, diarrhea, fever, and chills. Although it is rare, death from a foodborne illness can occur if children eat specific bacteria or a toxin produced from a bacterium.

For more information on handling food safely, call your local Penn State Cooperative Extension Office.

After capturing the state competition at the Maryland State Fair, Jason Ridinger, 18, Taneytown, is headed for 4-H national competition in the lawn tractor driving contest at Purdue University, Indiana, Sept. 22-25. Accompanying him are other division state champions: Joshua Stewart, tractor driving; Tim Owings, automotive; Rebekah Overstreet, bicycle; Kevin Roberts, computer; and Carl Kiefer, small engines. In addition to individual competition that includes a written and oral tests, and driving performance, team members will gather together to compete in a quiz bowl against teams from other states.

Dauphin County Clubs Celebrate 100 Years Of 4-H At Their Fair

DAUPHIN COUNTY (Dauphin Co.) — The 4-H clubs of Dauphin County celebrated the 100th anniversary of 4-H with their annual 4-H Fair. This year members and guests were encouraged to donate food items for the South Central Pennsylvania Food Bank with the goal to collect 100 bags of groceries, one for each year of 4-H.

The fair is normally run for four days and is located in the state Farm Show Complex. With the construction project under way at the complex, this year's fair was changed. The horse show was moved to the Twin Brooks Horse Show Association grounds in Linglestown and conducted in one day. The rest of the fair took place in a day and a half in an improvised show ring at the farm show complex.

Each of the four divisions of 4-H projects concludes their shows with a competition between champions known as a "Clover Award." Each of the four divisions is divided into two age brackets. To win this competition is to be selected as the Champion of Champions and is the highest achievement at the fair.

ANSWER — On page B23 of the Aug. 31 issue, a photo appeared asking readers help in identifying an object on display at the Rural Heritage Museum. Thanks to Marion Freeland, Califon, N.J., for writing that the object is an early pot scrubber, which she identified by referring to the book, "Kitchen Antiques with Values Book" by Frances Johnson. The Schiffer Book for Collectors has a photo of the object on page 154, and lists the selling price between $14-$17 in 1996. Marion writes that she collects unique antique kitchen gadgets but has never seen one of these for sale.

ANSWER — Here's another method for cleaning cast-iron skillets sent in by Deb Derstine. To clean a cast-iron skillet, never use soaps or detergents. Clean the cast iron while it is warm with hot water and wipe dry with a clean cloth. Do not scour or place in a dishwasher. Do not use cold water to cool cast iron as it will cause it to warp or crack.

Steps for reseasoning a cast-iron skillet:

1. Clean cast iron with warm soapy water and rinse in warm water.
2. Thoroughly dry cast iron by heating to 212 degrees on your stove.
3. While cast iron is still warm from the drying process, lightly grease it with cooking oil or bacon grease (do not use margarine or butter) and place in oven, upside down at 400 degrees for two hours.

The reader doesn't know if this is the old style, but it is a 16x20-inch picture called "Cherished for Generations!"

ANSWER — Chuck Reese, Taneytown, Md. has a source for mini-straw bales requested by Debbie Reese. Call him at (410) 751-1277.

ANSWER — Betty Smead lost the information printed a few weeks ago about house dresses for her mother. Write for an Anthony Richards' catalog, 6836 Engle Rd., P.O. Box 94503, Cleveland, Ohio 44101-4503. Phone 1-800-359-5933.

N.J. Sheep, Wool Festival Plans Open Show

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — The Garden State Sheep Breeders will present their eighth annual sheep and fiber festival on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 21 and 22 from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. at the Warren County Farmers Fairgrounds in Harmony, N.J.

Many activities are planned for this year's festival including an open sheep show starting at 10 a.m. and running throughout much of the day on Saturday.Sheep shearing will also be throughout the two days with some willing and not so willing volunteers. With a display of sheep breeds, spectators will be able to touch and see the difference in the many varieties there are in the sheep world.

An information booth will have free hand outs to those interested in learning more about sheep, llamas, alpacas, goats and more. "Cowboy" a most unusual Baby Doll sheep will be there on display. Cowboy was born in the spring with very unusual coloring for his breed. Baby Doll sheep are one of the smallest of breeds and are sold primarily as back yard pets. Farmersville Cheese Company will be on hand with samples and different sheep cheeses for sale.

The North Country Spinners will be participating at the festival. Members of this guild, located in Blairstown, N.J., will demonstrate carding wool, spinning it into yarn, dyeing it and finally knitting the yarn into hats. This year there will also be a lace maker and a weaver to demonstrate lost arts.

For a small fee, festival goers can take a ride on a hay wagon drawn by two horses, Jack and Jill. Owner Harm Pump of Hunterdon Coach and Wagon, Ltd. is located out of Stockton, N.J. and will guide "the gentle giants."

Walking a sheep at the 2000 New Jersey Sheep and Fiber Festival.

Border collie demonstrations will be given by Gene Sheninger, Rockaway Township, with his wife Lynne and daughters Beth Ann and Lauren. Gene is a border collie handler, trainer and breeder as well as a part-time sheep farmer.

This year on Sunday afternoon the festival will host a Parade of Breeds and also a Shepherd's Lead.

The United States Department of Agriculture will have an exhibit on Foot and Mouth Disease on the Voluntary Scrapie Flock Certification Program. Dr. A.C. Welch, a veterinarian with the USDA, will be on hand to answer any questions.

The Eastern Cashmere Association will feature a card grading show. The objective of card grading is to evaluate the goat's relative to an ideal standard and assess their potential as breeding stock. It also aims to strengthen the breeder's understanding of the characteristics and attributes of the breed, and sharpen his/her eye in the recognition of those characteristics.

The Garden State Sheep Breeders, Inc. is a nonprofit organization and is dedicated to the education and promotion of sheep and wool products in New Jersey. Monthly meetings are located in the Hunterdon County Extension building in Flemington, N.J. and are open to the public.

For more information about the meetings or this year's festival, contact Eunice Bench at (908) 730-7189 or Stephen Rothenberger at (908) 454-7611 or visit the web page at http://www.quintillion.com/sheepbreeders/.

Architectural History Tour Highlights Quaint Village

Historic Preservation Trust Stages Annual Event

The Wilson House, circa 1860, Maytown Road, is an example of the Italianate style, which originated in England and was popularized in America between 1850 and 1880.

The Gailbach Stone Distillery, built as early as 1762 or 1763, has been recently restored and will be open as part of the Maytown Architectural History Tour Sept. 22. This so-called "Rectifier House" was where Frederick Gailbach distilled whiskey more than 200 years ago which supplied his tavern located on the square in the village of Maytown.

MAYTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — You don't need to own a piece of architecture to admire the detailed handiwork of early craftsmen or to have your curiosity piqued about the history associated with it.

A splendid opportunity to see architectural styles and learn fascinating history is planned Sept. 22 in Maytown, a quaint Lancaster County village.

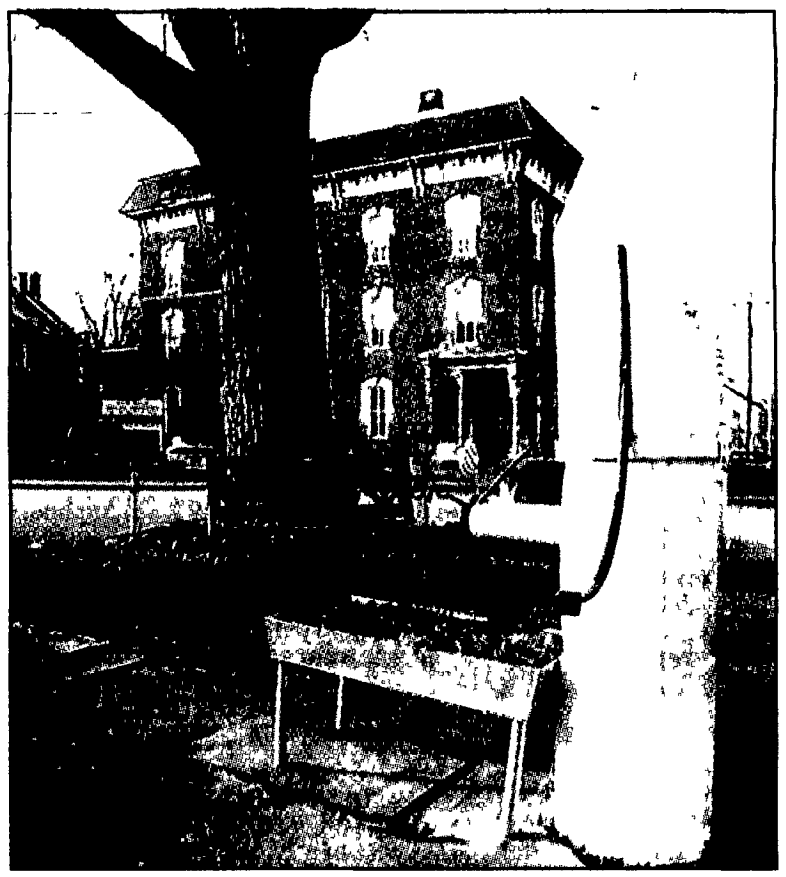
Fifteen historic sites demonstrating architectural styles ranging from early colonial forms to high Victorian splendor will be open to tour participants. Trained docents or tour guides at each location will share bits and pieces of history.

The Historical Preservation Trust of Lancaster County sponsors the tour, which highlights properties in East Donegal Township and Maytown that have been preserved by home and business owners. Maytown served as an early trade center for brickmaking and tobacco enterprises.

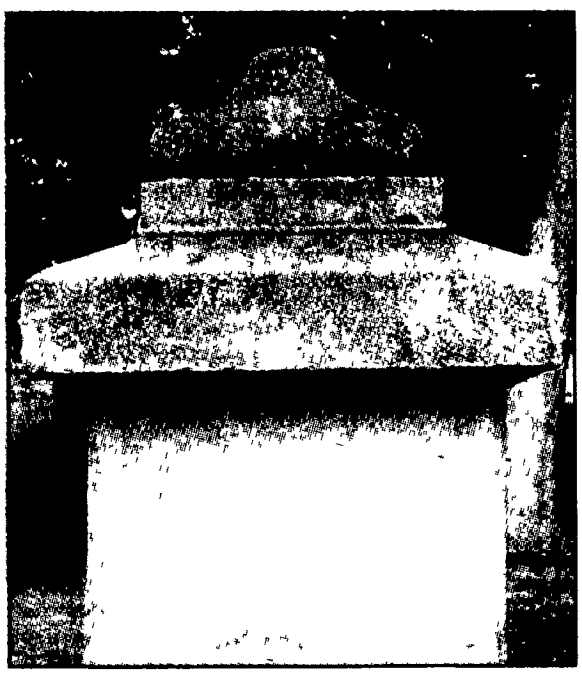
Randy Harris, executive director of the Historical Preservation Trust, said, "Maytown has been chosen for this year's tour because of its rich cultural history that is reflected in the periods and styles of its architecture. The area was first influenced by a Scots-Irish influx in the early 1700s, and later blended with German and English populations."

Harris said that tour go'ers can participate in a Mystery Tour in which 15 photographs of an architectural detail will be featured on entry forms. Tour go'ers who correctly name the building where each architectural piece can be found are eligible for a drawing to win one of three prizes.

B.F. Heistand House, circa 1875, Maytown Road. Now known as the Heistand-Herr House, this was one of the original homes in Maytown, which had been noted for lumber mills and coal mining operations.



Center Square, Maytown, is the setting for the Architectural History Tour's Hospitality Center, to be located in the former Shenk's Store. Here, tour-go'ers can buy tickets on tour day and see displays by six area heritage organizations.



The prominent gate post at the Simon Cameron Estate and Inn, left, is an architectural detail that will greet visitors on Tour Day, Sept. 22. Fifteen photographs of this kind of a building detail will be featured on entry forms for the Architectural Mystery Tour, a fun activity available on the day of the tour. Name all 15 architectural details on the entry form and win prizes. Three winners will be selected from the first correct entries selected in a drawing at the end of the tour. Architectural sleuths will find this classic "shutter dog," pictured on right, as part of the Architectural Mystery Tour.

Lunch will be available for purchase from noon to 5 p.m. at Saint John's Lutheran Church, where the youth group will provide chicken corn soup, hot dogs and sauerkraut, assorted salads, desserts, and drinks.

The tour is an educational fundraiser for the Historical Trust of Lancaster County, which has served area individuals, organizations and municipalities since 1966 with preservation advice, research, and counseling. Proceeds benefit historic preservation efforts throughout Lancaster County.

Tickets cost $12 per person in advance of the tour or $15 on the day of the tour.

To purchase tickets in advance, call the Trust's ofice at (717) 291-5861. On the day of the tour, tickets will be available at the hospitality center, Maytown Square. Maytown is located on Rt. 743, just off Rt. 441, north of Marietta.

For more information, call the trust at (717) 291-5861

Antiques Questions And Answers

This colorful, floral design pottery bowl and two small vases are marked "Italy" on the bottom. They came from my parents' home. Any information would be appreciated.

M.H. - Gellett, PA

Your pieces were made in the 1940s. The set could sell in a shop for $75.

I inherited this nautical "Tantalus." It was used to store the ship captain's liquor. It has three glass bottles and is marked "Edmonds, 67 Baker Street." I believe it would fetch a good price. What are your thoughts?

J.C.H. - Staten Island, N.Y.

cf102 Price depends on the quality of the materials used. You didn't say if the bottles are cut crystal or pressed glass. Your tantalus was made in England, probably turn-of-the-century. Similar sets have sold at auction for around $300-$400 with cut glass bottles.

What could this dresser with tall mirror be worth? It seems to be made of chestnut.

T.K. - Saltsburg, PA

Your piece is a cheval dresser, of golden oak. What makes it special is the attached side hat cabinet with two drawers. It dates around 1897 and was probably sold by Sears Roebuck. It could sell in a shop for $800.

I've acquired many old records -- 45s and 33s mostly. We could sell them all for one price or could some be worth something. Can you recommend a book on pricing?

J.V. - Omaha, NE

You'll find several record price guides at most book stores. Value depends on condition, rarity, popularity of the recording artists. You have to make a list and separate them accordingly.

Can you place a value on this glass duck that is part my cousin's glass collection? It is many shades of purple, blues and white.

M.S. - Pittsburgh, PA

Your cousin's purple slag glass appears to be a reproduction of original pieces made by the Imperial Glass Co. in the 1880s and reproduced by them in the 1970s. The value would be half of what she paid for the pieces.

Is there any value to a chalk figure of a yellow cat with a black hat that my elderly mother got at a carnival years ago?

C.D. - Dallas, TX

In good condition, with original paint, your chalkware cat could sell in a shop for $40-$50.

I bought a cute cup and saucer at a garage sale for $5. It is crackled and has elephants all around. It is marked Dedham Pottery and with a rabbit. Do I have a treasure?

C.F. - Chicago, Ill

You do indeed have a treasure that could sell in a shop form over $400. The Dedham Pottery originally opened in 1866 in Chelsea, Mass. After the original owner died it was moved to Dedham, Mass. in 1896.

Rococo Revival Furniture Redefined By John Belter

While many pieces of ornately carved Victorian rococo-style furniture can be had for well under $1,000, anything attributed to John Henry Belter sells at auction for $7,000 and up for a single chair, and at the recent James Julia auction, a Balter sofa sold for $62,750 — with good reason. He is considered the finest mid-century American cabinetmaker. It is his laminated and carved rococo revival rosewood parlor and bedroom suites that bring top dollar at auction.

The rococo revival in furniture began in Europe in the 1820s and 1830s. By the 1840s it had made its' way to America, along with other revival styles. It was considered the heighth of fashion with adaptations of the Louis XIV and Louis XV scrolls and carved, naturalistic vines and flowers.

Craftsmen got their training in France as well as Germany. For the most part they immigrated to New York city. However, many of the French, went to New Orleans, and created their versions of the rococo style. Some later added their own touch to Belter's laminating process.

In major cities of mid-19th century America the quality furniture was thought to be made in the French shops. None-the-less, the carvers and cabinetmakers were mostly German, working in the trendy rococo style.

Belter came to America in the 1840s along with hundreds of other German cabinetmakers. By 1844 he had his own shop in New York City, offering a new concept to the popular rococo revival furniture, lavishly carved, laminated, rosewood. About 40 trained, German apprentices worked with him.

The use of lamination had been known for some time. However, Belter created a new technique that steamied from four to 16 layers of wood in "cawls" or molds. They were bent into an endless variety of shapes and then carved. The leaf and grapes with graceful tendril motifs was but one of his several designs. His furniture was so radically different fro any of his contemporaries that it became known then. and today, as "Belter furniture." It was expensive in its' day and now. This was especially true for such early patterns as "Arabasket" that were made to order.

He took out a series of patents between 1847 to 1858. This didn't protect him from Charles Baudouine, who, by making some minor changes, was able to infringe on Belter's patents.

By 1855 Belter furniture had become the most expensive to be found in New York City.

Rosewood, rosewood veneers and ash were the primary materials. The end result was a sturdy, but relatively lightweight piece of furniture.

CLUES: Some of Belter's pattern names don't seem to relate to the designs, such as Tuthill King or Rosalie. On the other hand "arabasket" is a combination of arabesque and basket. This pattern is highlighted with a central motif of a flower-filled basket. The "arabesque" refers to the curving lines, vines and leaves flanking it.

Belter had many copiers, whose pieces closely resembled his. Some are well known such as Alexander Roux, Prudent Mallard and Francois Seignoret of New Orleans, and Charles Baudouine. The Meeks Company also made look-alikes. Yet, experts agree, none quite came up to Belter's standards. His carving was lacier and more intricate.

When several pieces of laminated rococo revival pieces came to the August 23rd James Julia auction in Maine, the pieces attributed to Belter brought from $48,300 for a marble top table to a single side chair that sold for $7,475.

VOICES OF EXPERIENCE

It is best known for its crackleware with animals within a blue band.

I inherited a most unusual chair that is made of horns and antlers. Does it have any value? What can you tell me about it?

M.C. T.- Detroit, MI

Furniture made with horns and antlers was popular in the late 19th century, especially in the southwest. When pieces such as your chair come to auction they can sell for $900-$1,200.

At a recent garage sale I paid $10 for a small vase that is marked on the bottom "Paul Revere Pottery" and within the circle a figure, presumably of Paul Revere on a horse. Is it really that old? Did Paul Revere make it?

B.J. - Evanston, IL

Your pottery vase was made around 1908-1915. It was so named because the pottery was located near the Old North Church. Your vase could sell in a shop for several hundred dollars.

Help! I am trying to locate two items for my mother's Mae Starr doll, made in 1929 by the Effanbee Doll Co. The doll played records that fit inside the doll. She has all original clothes except shoes, and the records. I tried the internet without success. Where do I go from here?

S.T. - Duxbury, MA

Help will be on the way when you contact either Jan Foulke, doll author and dealer in vintage doll clothes on the internet at Hobbyhouse@Genet.net or write to Patricia R. Smith, author-doll replacements c/o Collector Books, P.O. Box 3009, Paducah, KY, 42002-3009.

CARTER Lumber THE YARD

NCGA Appoints Disaster Task Force To Assist Growers On Options

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — It has been a tough year for farmers across the nation. Growers in Kansas and South Dakota, for example, are seeing historically dry conditions, whereas Minnesota and North Dakota producers are not only facing a drought, in some parts of those states there is too much moisture. In an effort to assist the nation's farmers, National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) President Tim Hume has appointed a Disaster Task Force.

NCGA's decision to appoint the task force was the result of collaborative efforts between NCGA and grower leaders from state corn grower and checkoff organizations. The mission of the task force is:

- Make sure that clear, timely and accurate information on the impact of the disaster situation gets to policy-makers and program implementers.
- Share information between growers and states on assistance programs and options to assist crop and livestock producers in responding to the disaster.
- Set a course of further action for NCGA with respect to disaster response.

Ron Litterer, vice chair of the NCGA Public Policy Action Team, was appointed to chair the task force. Other task force members are: Alan Peter, Tribune, Kan.; Bernie Heier, Walton, Neb.; Darren Ihnen, Hurley, S.D.; Steve Pigg, Bushnell, Ill.; Michael Aylesworth, Hebron, Ind.; Dee Vaughan, Dumas, Texas; Brent Rockhold, Arbela, Mo.; and Sam Willett, NCGA director of public policy.

Litterer, a Greene, Iowa, grower, said the task force will analyze the effects the severe weather conditions will have on growers. "The farm bill provides growers with monetary protection and crop insurance provides protection on the production side," he said, "but we need to see if the level of protection and coverage is adequate. We need to also recognize, this isn't just a corn grower issue. This also affects our number-one customer, the livestock industry."

Litterer said the disaster is affecting farmers and livestock producers throughout the country. "It's important to recognize, as USDA has, this is an issue causing problems all over the United States," he said.

The long-term effects of the severe weather conditions are apparent in the USDA crop production report released Aug. 12, projecting a 8.89 billion bushel corn crop. This represents a seven-percent drop from last year and 10 percent from 2000. If the USDA's projections are realized, this would be the lowest production year since 1995.

Based on conditions as of Aug. 1, national yields are expected to average 125.2 bushels per acre, down 13.0 bushels from last year. Yields are mostly lower than 2001 across much of the United States as wet weather during planting caused delays in the eastern Corn Belt. Also, according to USDA, persistent hot, dry weather has stunted growth and limited yield potential over many acres of the United States. Farmers expect to harvest 71 million acres of corn for grain, down 1.08 million acres from June, but up 3 percent from 2001. The USDA projects 8.9 billion bushels of corn produced in 2002, down from 9.5 billion bushels in 2001.

In related news, Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman announced Aug. 12 that $150 million in supplemental feed is being made available to farmers and ranchers operating cow-calf operations in areas most severely stricken by drought.

"President Bush and this administration continue to be concerned about the impact of severe drought conditions to farmers in certain states," said Veneman. "This additional funding for supplemental feed, coupled with the many other programs we have expedited in recent months, will provide much needed relief to farmers in the most devastated areas."

Under the new program, Colorado, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming are among the states initially eligible. At least 75 percent of the pasture and range crop in these states is rated as poor or very poor. USDA will provide assistance only for future purchases of feed for beef cow-calf operations, not for past expenses.

The program will use both USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) authority and Agricultural Marketing Service's Section 32 authorities and will run through Dec. 31 or until available funds are exhausted, whichever comes first.

For more information regarding this matter, please visit our Website at www.ncga.com.

Brandywine Conservancy Launches Major Project

CHADDS FORD (Chester Co.) — In an effort to combat suburban sprawl in western Chester County by providing the best approaches to land conservation and municipal planning, the Brandywine Conservancy recently announced the start of a major, year-long project known as Conservation Opportunities for Corridor Preservation and Community Development.

"The land on both sides of Route 41 in western Chester County holds some of the richest soil for farming in the nation," said George A. Weymouth, chairman of the Brandywine Conservancy's Board of Trustees. "Developers see the value in the land too, but for houses, not crops. The Conservation Opportunities project will help municipalities and private landowners conserve farms and better manage growth."

Conservation Opportunities takes a regional approach to conservation planning by focusing on the communities along Pennsylvania's Route 41, including London Grove, Avondale, Londonderry, West Fallowfield, Highland, Atglen and West Sadsbury. John Theilacker and David Shields, both associate directors of the Conservancy's Environmental Management Center, will lead the project.

"There is a tremendous need for this project," said John Theilacker. "The Pennsylvania Department of Transportation is considering major changes for Route 41, and several municipalities in the corridor are inundated with applications for new residential development. In Londonderry Township, tor example, developers have proposed 442 new houses that could fulfill the township's projected population for the year 2025 in only the next five years. Highland Township, projected by the Delaware Valley Regional Planning Commission to lose population by the year 2025, has 134 new houses proposed for township approval. The same holds true for London Grove Township, where a new sewage treatment plant has opened up extensive acreage to new residential development south of Route 1."

"We believe sound planning will lead to safe roads and strong communities," said David Shields. "Without appropriate planning, we will lose thousands of acres of nationally-recognized, prime agricultural soils, viable farming areas will fragment, and towns and villages will be robbed of long-standing family businesses. Over the years, municipal officials and private landowners have worked hard planning for the future and conserving land. Their challenges are only going to magnify, and the Conservancy's growth management strategies are intended to help."

Initially, the project will assess the strengths and weaknesses of current municipal plans and zoning ordinances assuming the predominantly agricultural use of land within the corridor changes over time. It will also analyze the costs of increased development compared to the costs of open space conservation within the corridor. The project will explore rural transportation corridors in other parts of the United States that have successfully integrated conservation with community development. When the information is gathered, the Conservancy will present its findings to communities in the corridor.

Members of the Conservancy staff will work with interested municipalities to develop growth management, resource conservation and community development strategies. In addition, staff members will consult with private landowners regarding agricultural and conservation easements.

Since 1967, the Brandywine Conservancy has worked with landowners, government officials, farmers and developers to successfully integrate land and resource conservation with development. The Conservancy's professional planners, natural resource managers and specialists in land conservation provide sophisticated experience. To date, the Conservancy has been instrumental in permanently protecting more than 39,000 acres in southeastern Pennsylvania and northern Delaware.

For more information about the Conservancy's programs and services, visit the Conservancy's Website at www.brandywineconservancy.org or call (610) 388-2700.

Md. Grain Board Awards Scholarships

EDGEWATER, Md. — Rewarding students for their dedication to the future of agriculture and their academic excellence, the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board (MGPUB), as part of their checkoff program, awarded Jeremiah Weddle and Jason Scott each a $2,500 scholarship during the Maryland Commodity Classic, July 25.

"Just as the checkoff program requires commitment and is a long-term investment, so is our commitment to education and to the agriculture industry," said Mike Clark, president of MGPUB. "The young folk who attend college today will come back into our industry and help us grow and prosper."

Jason Scott of Dorchester County is enrolled at the University of Maryland, majoring in agriculture and resource economics. He maintains a 3.2 grade point average and intends to return to his family's farm after graduation.

Jeremiah Weddle of Washington County is a second-year winner of this scholarship. He is a student at Delaware Valley College with a grade point average of 3.95. With a focus on agronomy and crop science, Weddle plans to return to his family's farm to continue raising corn, soybeans and replacement heifers.

XL Series

Here's why:

- 5-bar pickup handles bigger windrows, faster speeds
- Simple, horizontal bale-starting system is designed for fast starts
- Bottom drum design lets you pull in hay faster, often allowing you to drive a full gear faster
- Best HaySaver Wheels in the field
- Up to 1200 lbs. in a single 65" dia. x 48" wide package; 2000 lb. capacity with silage baler option
- Silage option lets you bale wet or dry without changing a thing.
- Makes bales 17% larger* than a standard 5' dia. x 4' wide baler at virtually the same price! ****

Cut-Out Clutch Protection
No more burnt or hot discs to wrestle with. Great protection ... for those times when your baler's pulling harder on the outside rows, the tractor's overpowered, or you accidently overfill when trying to bale that last strip of hay.

* determined by comparing volume measurement of a standard 60" dia. x 48" wide bale versus a 65" dia. x 48" wide Vermeer bale

 Price comparison is based on published list prices (Y2000) between Vermeer 554XL Series Baler and other 5' x 4' competitive round baler models

Suzuki QuadRunner ATVs may be used by those aged 16 and older. Suzuki highly recommends that all ATV riders take a training course. We'll even pay for it. For safety and training course information, see your dealer or call the SVIA at 1-800-852-5344. ATVs can be hazardous to operate. For your safety, always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Riding and alcohol or other drugs don't mix. Avoid excessive speeds. Be extra careful on difficult terrain. Along with concerned conservationists everywhere, Suzuki urges you to "TREAD LIGHTLY" on public and private land. Preserve your future riding opportunities by showing respect for the environment, local laws and the rights of others when you ride.

Plum Bottom Dairy Farm Conducts Ayrshire Sale

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — At the fifth annual "Raised to Graze" Ayrshire sale at Plum Bottom Dairy Farms, "Prices were down from last year," said owner John Rodgers, but "Happily number of buyers was up, attendance was great."

According to Rodgers, the quality of the animals was respectable and the buyers should be satisfied with production and classification results as the animals adjust to a new home and mature as individuals. His sale report follows:

The high selling animal was Plum Bottom Tridents Paris. At $2,000, she was purchased by Jason Mowery of Roaring Springs. A good uddered cow that ought to milk much and show well.

Paul Lewis from nearby McVeytown was largest volume buyer taking seven head to his home farm.

Jeff Atherton from Greenwood, N.Y. has been a purchaser at all five "Raised to Graze" sales and reports that he still has all animals purchased through these sales. He again purchased three head in this year's sale.

Louis Winters from Valley Grove, W.Va. took two head back to West Virginia. One a Reno daughter from the 2E Plum Bottom Tridents Penny. Penny is also the dam of Plum Bottom Taurus S. Petey, a sire in waiting from Taurus Service, Inc.

Steve Yancey from Florida wins the Plum Bottom Sweepstakes with high animal purchased in last year's sale at 23,000 pounds of milk on a mature equivalent basis.

The sixth annual sale will be Aug. 16, 2003.

Sale averages: 10 cows, average $1,155; 16 fresh first calvers, $1,160; 18 bred heifers, average $906; two open heifers, average $775; two calves, avefage $525; and three yearling bulls, average $366.

Ginseng May Be Lucrative Specialty Crop

PIKETON, Ohio — A group of tiny plants, no more than an inch in height, inconspicuously grow in a wooded area on the grounds of Ohio State University's South Centers at Piketon.

But within three years, the plants will be more than a foot high and have produced a root highly sought after for its health benefits. It will be another four years before the plants are mature enough for the roots to be marketed.

Ohio State researchers are trying their hand at growing American ginseng and other non-timber forest products to boost economic sustainability for farmers looking to raise alternative crops.

"Ohio is a good place to raise ginseng," said Shawn Wright, an Ohio State horticulturist, adding that wild ginseng can be found throughout the state, especially in the southern region where acidic soils and shady Appalachian slopes make for ideal growing conditions.

Wright and Ohio State soil and water specialist Rafiq Islam are practicing agroforestry, a widely accepted production technique in developing countries that is regaining favor in the United States. Agroforesty is the idea of growing agricultural products in forested areas to help manage the natural environment while producing a marketable crop.

Islam said ginseng makes a good candidate for agroforestry production because wild simulated ginseng roots are more of a high-value crop than ginseng cultivated in greenhouses. Wild simulated ginseng is normally grown in untilled forest soils over a period of nine to 12 years. Roots from wild simulated ginseng most closely resemble the appearance of true wild ginseng

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agroforestry Center, prices for wild simulated ginseng have risen high enough to be extremely profitable for those landowners with suitable land.

"Root buyers will pay between $300 and $400 per pound of wild ginseng root, compared to $10 or $15 for roots cultivated in greenhouses," said Islam "Some buyers will pay as much as $700 per pound of roots. Wild ginseng has a better bioactive component and produces roots of acceptable size, color and shape that markets are looking for."

Americans, Europeans and Asians, specifically, highly prize ginseng for its medicinal benefits. The roots, boiled in teas or soups, or ground to a fine powder, have been known to relieve fatigue, mental and nervous exhaustion and are useful in controlling loss of appetite and digestive problems. Countless over-the-counter herbal remedies contain ginseng or ginseng extracts.

"There is a growing interest in Ohio for producers to grow and market wild-simulated ginseng to those Asian markets," said Wright. "If we can conduct trial plots on the best way to grow ginseng and what techniques to use, we can aid producers in growing a high-quality product they can get a good price for."

Although the researchers have just begun their ginseng trials, they do know that it takes many years — generally at least seven — for a ginseng plant to reach an age where the roots can be harvested. Ginseng plants also prefer shade and should be planted on northern or eastern slopes where little sunlight penetrates the forest canopy Ginseng plants are also water sensitive and grow best in areas with high organic matter

The researchers noted that raising wild simulated ginseng is a time-consuming practice that takes many years of investment and patience to turn any kind of a profit. They added, however, that it isn't a management-intensive operation

In a report released by the USDA National Agroforestry Center, a projected nine-year budget for a half-acre of wild simulated ginseng comes to over $7,600, which includes the cost of seed, labor, materials and equipment and drying techniques. If an expected yield of 80 pounds of roots garners a profit of $24,000 at $300 per pound of roots, estimated net profit is roughly $16,300.

American ginseng has been cultivated in the United States since the 1800s According to the most recent USDA Census of Agriculture, Wisconsin tops the states with the highest ginseng production In 2000, the U.S. exported over $41 million worth of ginseng to foreign markets.

Wild ginseng is an internationally protected plant and in order for it to be exported from any state, the USDA requires that it be certified as being cultivated. If wild plants are gathered, they must be harvested according to the rules and regulations of a state certification program, approved by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Currently, only 20 states, Ohio included, have such a program.

Philip Towle Joins MidAtlantic Farm Credit

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Philip Towle of Wyoming, Del., has joined the staff of MidAtlantic Farm Credit as an account executive in its Denton, Md. office. He will provide loan and financial services to current and prospective customers.

A graduate of Caesar Rodney High School in Camden-Wyoming, Del., Towle earned his B.S. degree in agribusiness management from the University of Delaware in Newark, Del. He was raised on his family's poultry farm.

"With his agricultural background we feel Philip will be an asset to the customers in the Denton area," says Charmayne Busker, area manager for MidAtlantic Farm Credit. "We feel fortunate to have him join our team," she continues. In his spare time Philip enjoys running, golf and skiing.

Vermeer Expands TwinRake Line With New Hydraulic 28-Foot Model

PELLA, Iowa — Vermeer's popular hydraulically-driven twin-basket TwinRakes are getting bigger, according to the Pella, Iowa hay equipment manufacturer.

The new R-28 TwinRake — Vermeer's latest addition to the line — sweeps up to 28 feet wide. Raking widths are hydraulically adjustable, from a minimum of 20 feet up to the 28-foot maximum. Hydraulic windrow-width control allows you to vary windrow widths from three to six feet. This allows operators to produce clean, custom-sized, box-style windrows, perfectly matched to the baler pickup for faster easier baling.

An in-cab monitor allows the operator to adjust raking widths, windrow widths and switch from transport to field-ready without leaving the tractor seat. Mechanical jacks, located at the front and rear of the basket, are used to mechanically adjust tooth-to-ground clearance.

Basket speed — independent of the ground speed — is also hydraulically adjustable to handle different crops or conditions. (Hydraulic basket speed adjustment is optional). By using the extra seventh bar (in combination with the increased number of tines and larger diameter basket reels), rotating speed has been reduced to just 90 rpm for smooth gentle handling.

R-28 TwinRake construction combines a rugged 5-inch by 7-inch rectangular steel main frame with a continuous round cross-section toolbar. Each side features a heavy-duty, seven-bar basket, with 182 tines per basket. The tines are rubber-mounted for longer life and reduced maintenance.

Large, caster-type wheels (27 x 9.50 x 15, four-ply ribbed) help cushion the ride, smooth out the turns and maintain the rake's setting as it negotiates changing contours and terrain. A bolt-on spindle, located upfront, reduces stress to both the bearings and arms.

Going from field to transport takes just seconds; the process is all hydraulically controlled from the tractor seat. A two-stage hydraulic system slides the telescoping stabilizer/linkage arms along the tongue, drawing the front-fold baskets together. The baskets are then locked into position on a center post and lifted for transport on 11L x 15, four-ply ribbed rear tires. Transport width is just 102 inches.

Recommended tractor size is 70 hp; hydraulic requirements include two auxiliary remotes, with a minimum flow of 8 gpm at 2000 psi.

A square-mount swivel jack, with 5,000-pound capacity and top-crank handle, is also standard.

Deere To Consolidate Consumer Equipment Division

MOLINE, Ill. — Deere & Company recently announced that its second-largest business unit, the Commercial & Consumer Equipment Division, is realigning its manufacturing operations in order to improve asset utilization and lower costs.

As part of this effort, the company will close facilities in Williamsburg, Virginia, and Jeffersonville, Indiana, and streamline operations at Horicon, Wisconsin.

Deere said these actions will result in pretax charges totaling $50 million over the third and fourth quarters. As a result, the company said, the division's operating performance will improve by approximately $25 million pretax on an annualized basis starting next year. This announcement does not change the company's outlook for operating margins in 2002.

Although these actions will rationalize the division's overall production capacity, Deere said the plans fully anticipate the substantial production increases of the new 100-series of lawn tractors to be sold at John Deere dealers and at The Home Depot.

Deere separately also announced that introduction of the new 100-series line along with a new agreement with The Home Depot is expected to increase lawn tractor sales in both the dealer and mass channels, thereby increasing production at the John Deere plant in Greeneville, Tennessee.

Production of Gator® Utility vehicles at the Williamsburg, Virginia manufacturing facility, which employs approximately 200 people, will move to facilities in Horicon, Wisconsin, Deere's largest factory in the Commercial & Consumer Equipment Division and Welland, Ontario, where some of the Gator® Utility Vehicle line is already produced. Some Williamsburg employees will be offered transfers as a part of the realignment.

In Jeffersonville, Indiana, John Deere will close a plant that produces Great Dane™ commercial mowing equipment and consolidate production from that leased facility to the company's primary turf care equipment plant in Fuquay-Varina, North Carolina. Deere employs around 35 full-time employees plus a number of contracted workers at the Great Dane™ facility. Deere said some employees in Indiana will also be eligible for transfers.

The John Deere plant in Fuquay-Varina, which today employs approximately 395 individuals, already produces John Deere-branded turfcare equipment and will add production of Great Dane-branded products for John Deere dealers and Great Dane distributors.

Case IH Launches New Line Of Mid-Range Row-Crop Tractors

RACINE, Wis. — Completely redesigned for 2002, the Case IH MXM Series Maxxum® tractors provide more horsepower, more standard equipment, and more features to improve operator comfort and field efficiency.

"With horsepower ranging from 95 to 160 PTO hp, Case IH MXM Series tractors offer a variety of features to boost efficiency and productivity both in the field and feedlot," says Ray DeMond, product specialist for over 100 PTO hp tractors. "MXM tractors pair well with loaders, planters, balers, mower conditioners and tillage tools."

Four standard wheelbase models — the MXM120, MXM130, MXM140 and MXM155 — offer 95, 105, 115 and 125 PTO hp, respectively. Two additional long wheelbase models — the MXM175 and MXM190 — provide 145 and 160 PTO hp. All six are available in two-wheel drive and mechanical front-wheel drive (MFD) configurations.

Powered by a 7.5-liter turbocharged and aftercooled Case IH engine, MXM Series Maxxum tractors are rated at 2,200 rpm. However, they produce their maximum torque at 1,400 to 1,500 rpm with a torque rise of 30 to 40 percent, depending on model.

Long wheelbase MXM models offer an all-new, innovative engine management system. This new feature ensures that the operator will get the maximum horsepower in non-static PTO and roading applications. It also reduces the effects of parasitic loss in both of these applications, improving overall productivity.

Electronic engine management will ensure that the PTO maintains its rated speed when the additional power is needed. Also, when transporting in 16th gear or higher, maximum engine horsepower is automatically made available when conditions warrant.

"The MXM operator can rest assured that the system's additional 35 horsepower will be used to the maximum benefit without having to lift a finger," DeMond explains. "No programming or attention is needed."

AEM's Mid-Year Ag Industry Outlook Shows Signs Of Recovery

CHICAGO, Ill. — Despite some continuing signs of a decline in U.S. unit retail sales of farm tractors, self-propelled combines, farm field machinery and farmstead equipment, the outlook for the remainder of 2002 and forecast for 2003 is showing signs of recovery according to the Association of Equipment Manufacturers' (AEM) recently-released "2002 Mid-Year State of the Ag Industry Outlook."

With the exception of a few categories, sales of agricultural equipment for 2003 look modestly positive, stated Rex Spreitsma, Westfalia-Surge, Inc., who presented the findings at the Association's Mini-Ag Conference in Chicago, Ill. July 16.

Although predictions in January reported a decline in the total sales of all two-wheel and four-wheel-drive farm tractors of 3.3 percent compared to 2001 sales, responses from key industry agricultural manufacturers indicate a 2.0 percent increase for 2002 and 1.8 percent increase for 2003 due to increased sales predicted for two-wheel-drive farm tractors under 40 PTO Hp and 40-100 PTO Hp.

Both two-wheel-drive farm tractors 100 PTO Hp and over and four-wheel-drive tractors are still forecasting a decline in sales for 2002 versus 2001 of 3.2 percent and 9.0 percent, respectively.

Farm tractor sales for 2003, however, indicate an upward trend in all categories, with an overall forecast of 1.8 percent increase in sales over 2002. Four-wheel-drive tractors lead the way with a forecast increase of 10.7 percent in sales.

U.S. unit retail sales of self-propelled combines continue to indicate a decline for 2002 with sales predicted to be 4.4 percent less than in 2001. However a turnaround is forecast for 2003 with an increase in sales of 4.8 percent.

The outlook for farm field machinery remains mixed for 2002. Half of the product categories surveyed show an increase in sales for this year, while the other half show negative results.

Among the farm field machinery category, mower conditioners, windrowers/swathers, field cultivators and farm loaders all show positive retail sales for 2002 and 2003. The demand for manure spreaders and chisel plows, however, is forecast to be down for both 2002 and 2003.

Round balers, planters, disk harrows and air seeders/air drills all indicate negative sales for 2002, but their outlook for 2003 looks positive with a sales increase of 0.4, 4.9, 2.2 and 9.0 percent, respectively.

Also showing positive sales for 2002 are rectangular balers and forage harvesters; however, their sales for 2003 are predicted to be fairly flat by 1.2 and 5 percent.

Milking machines continue to show an increase growth of sales for the remainder of 2002 and into 2003. Sales for 2002 are projected to increase by 4.8 percent over last year's figures and by 2.5 percent in 2003 over 2002 forecast.

Galvanized or Galvalume?

For metal roofing and siding, which is better, painted Galvanized or painted Galvalume?. Galvanizing is many times better if it's mill certified G100. Why is it better? Galvanizing tends to "heal" when scratched. The more galvanizing, the better. Everlast is ten times better at "healing" than galvalume because galvalume hardly "heals" at all when scratched. Also cut edges rust quickly on galvalume.

Announcing:
Crude Soy Oil Now Available
With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations.

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:,
• Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
• Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
• Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
• Can be used for dust control purposes.
• Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:
• Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
• Vegetable based product
• Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
• Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills
• Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:
• Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program
• We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40.
• Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

Virginia Grazier Sold On Bermuda Grass

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

HARRISONBURG, Va.— Michael Phillips has something to prove. On July 27 during the Second World Feeder Bermuda Grass Field Day, some 145 persons learned what it is.

"My goal in an average year is to graze year around and not make hay," Phillips said. "I'm gonna do it."

The progressive grazier didn't predict when this would happen, although he warned he's been known to "talk the ears off a stalk of corn."

Phillips invited field day participants to walk through the tender Bermuda grass without their socks and shoes. He spoke about the benefits of this versatile grass on which he grazes a variety of livestock, including beef cows.

"The cheapest machine you can run has four legs and a fly swatter," he said.

For every person who is willing to listen and bold enough to try something new, there are scores of non-believers when it comes to Bermuda grass moving north from the deep south where it is generally grown.

"Some say it's too cold here for Bermuda," Phillips said.

He reported being laughed at so much that he tries to plant where the neighbors can't see.

Phillips and his wife Susan operate a rotational grazing system diversified with 80 brood cows, 40 ewes and two poultry houses that, so far, have survived unscathed in the 2002 avian influenza outbreak.

Bit by bit, Phillips continues to kill off the fescue on his farm in order to plant more Bermuda grass. The preferred time for this is in the fall, just before the first bitter frost hits, he said. He then seeds winter rye — rather than ryegrass — prior to planting Bermuda grass "sprigs" the following year.

"I will not use ryegrass," he said. "It continually wants to come back."

The Bermuda sprigs can be planted by hand or by machine for larger areas. Phillips uses a machine converted

Aged and new Bermuda grass is pictured at the World Feeder Bermuda Grass Field Day, conducted at the farm of Michael and Susan Phillips, Harrisonburg, Va.. The roots of Bermuda grass go deep into the earth to pull up moisture. Experienced growers of Bermuda can't say enough about its potential to make money for the farmer. The versatile grass is high in digestibility, protein, and tonnage; starts earlier, grows longer, and stays tender the whole year, they claim. According to growers, all breeds of livestock love it, but especially horses.

Lehigh Hay Exporter Keeps Delivering In Drought Year

From Field To Ship, The Finks Maximize Hay-Handling Efficiency

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

GERMANSVILLE (Lehigh Co.) — For three decades, David Fink has been a leader in innovative hay marketing.

Even through drought years like this one, the nature of his business allows him to keep shipping large volumes of high quality hay to horse and dairy farms as far away as the Carribean Islands and Europe. Dry weather has also increased demand for hay on the East Coast.

Fink first began compressing hay on Heidel Hollow Farm here in the mid-1970s. Even today, this enterprise is still relatively rare in our region, though more common in the northwest part of the country.

Much of the manual labor in Fink's operation has been eliminated over the years, but the principle remains the same: cured hay is compressed into super-dense packages that can be shipped as efficiently as possible.

With the help of wife Sonia, sons Travis and Mike, and a staff that includes about 18 workers during harvesting season, Fink markets 5,000 tons of hay per year. About 75 percent of that is harvested from 900 acres of timothy, alfalfa, orchardgrass and mixed hay stands on the home farm and nearby rented land.

Beside minimizing freight costs, the Finks also strive to deliver a top-quality product. Heidel Hollow Farm hay, in fact, posted three first-place winners in this year's Hay Show at Ag Progress Days.

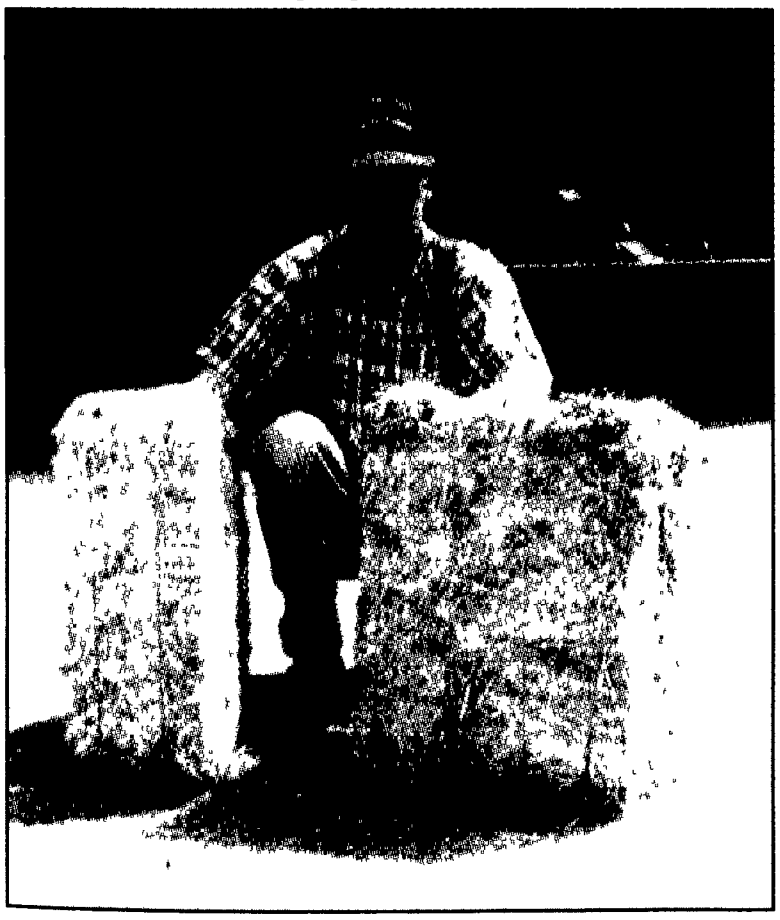
"The key to marketing hay is getting the right product to the consumer at an affordable price," Fink said. And the cost of transport can "make or break the ability to get into the market," he pointed out.

The hay processing operation on Fink's farm converts 800-pound square bales (3 X 3 X 8 feet) into compact square bales, 22 inches long. Don't expect to grab one of these little bales, however, and toss it into the hay rack with the ease you would a regular small bale. These bales have been packed together with about a million pounds of hydraulic pressure in a compressing machine. The result is a bale weighing 70-90 pounds, depending on the type of hay.

The Finks harvest large quantities in a short period of time, as close to the peak of production as possible. For timothy, that generally means the pre- to early flower stage, between June 10 and 20. Alfalfa harvest begins in the third week of May.

Once the season begins, "we just go," Fink said. Harvest is continuous through the summer

(Turn to Page E17)



David Fink shows off the final product of his hay processing operation. These compressed bales weigh about 35 and 80 pounds, respectively. While later alfalfa and grass cuttings have suffered from drought, the Finks have harvested more than 3,000 tons so far this year, including an excellent crop of timothy in June.

I find it hard to believe that my grandchildren have gone back to school and summer is drawing to a close. My oldest grandson is playing football this year, so that makes him part of the team. Well, just like my grandson, I too have become part of a team. Webster defines a team as a group of people working together in a coordinated effort.

By now, you may be wondering what team I am part of. Well, I am pleased to say I am part of the Natural Resources Conservation Service's (NRCS) grazing team.

What could a grazing team do? Is it a group that is grazing as a team? The grazing team that has been put together by Robin Heard, Pennsylvania's State Conservationist, has been charged with the job of providing technical assistance to the people of Pennsylvania to plan and install grazing systems. This team is made of up six

PFGC ❖ SPECIAL REPORT ❖

Dave Hartman
Columbia County Extension

Lets face it — some people are better at working with animals than others.

Although most individuals who raise livestock like to think of themselves as having good handling abilities, there are differences. As an extension agent I have quietly observed this fact over the years in pastures, feedlots, and farrowing houses. It can be observed in the reaction of the animals to new people or just people. This phenomenon can also be observed at county fairs and 4-H shows. Many times the 4-H'er who has a steer that doesn't behave well has a parent who doesn't work well around cattle.

Working with livestock in grazing systems presents special challenges to the stockperson. Getting animals to do what we want, when we want it, requires the ability to see ahead and visualize what will happen. This sounds much easier than what it really is as anyone who has tried to handle livestock on pastures can attest. However, knowing a few things about how animals view the situation can help make the outcome more successful.

Following some basic guidelines in designing actual working systems can make the handling experience better for both man and beast. Some planning ahead and investing a little more money into good handling setups is worthwhile, especially if you will have a need to handle a significant number of animals.

Although persons with the knack to successfully handle animals would probably classify their abilities as an art, it is also a science as well. Scientific research on livestock behavior has led to a better understanding of why animals react the way they do to various situations. Furthermore, it has led to research-based recommendations on handling and handling facility design.

Dr. Temple Grandin, professor of animal science at Colorado State University has done extensive research on handling cattle, sheep, and goats and on facility design. Grandin's research has verified much of what good livestock handlers know and revealed new information to improve the handling and welfare of livestock. More detailed information on this subject, as well as cattle handling facility design, can be found at www.grandin.com.

The following facts related to livestock handling are excerpted from one of Grandin's articles:

- Stress reduces the animal's ability to fight disease, increases weight loss (or decreases weight gain), damages rumen function, and can negatively impact conception rates.
- Cattle have long memories.
- Severely agitated cattle take 20-30 minutes to return to a normal heart rate.
- Some genetic lines of cattle are calmer than others.
- Handling is easier in the future if halters are used instead of nose tongs for head restraint and if electric prod usage is kept to an absolute minimum. Cattle can be handled with horses, vehicles, or people on foot.
- A herd of cattle is like a car: before you can steer, the car must be moving.
- Severely agitated cattle may secrete a "smell of fear" substance that can be detected by other cattle.

Behavior Principles

- Cattle have wide-angle vision (greater than 300 degrees): they can see behind themselves without turning their head. There is a very small blind spot directly behind the animal. Avoid getting in this blind spot.
- In a moving herd, the strongest dominant animals are in the middle and the weakest, subordinate animals are on the outside.Cattle are a prey species and are therefore ever vigilant and fear novelty.
- The flight zone is the cow's personal space. The size of the flight zone is determined by several factors including wildness or tameness, and the angle of the handler's approach.
- The point of balance is an imaginary line perpendicular to the animal's shoulder. Moving in front of the point of balance makes the animal go backward. Approaching behind the point of balance makes the animal go forward. If cows on pasture turn and look at you, you are outside the flight zone.
- To keep cattle moving, alternately enter and retreat from the flight zone.
- When the cattle are worked in an enclosed space such as an alley or crowd pen, avoid deeply penetrating the flight zone.

from an original tobacco planter and a tree planter.

Phillips has 27 acres of corn and 23 of soybeans. So far, Bermuda grass is growing on 23 acres, with alfalfa on 75 acres.

"I love it," he says of alfalfa, "except for that bloat problem you run into."

Yet, alfalfa has been good to him and Phillips says at this early stage of the Bermuda experiment, he is not going to get caught without a surplus of hay. As a feed source, however, Phillips wants to show farmers this far north that after two winters in Virginia, Bermuda grass looks more and more promising. Bermuda roots go deep to pull out moisture. That's a key factor when droughts in the state appear to be recurring with greater frequency and intensity.

During its first year the Bermuda grass wasn't grazed, but this year, to see how it would hold up, the experimenter reported to the group that he "punished" it as much as he could by running four cows to an acre instead of the usual two cows on 1½ to two acres.

"They could not eat it down," he said.

"I really feel this could be a real benefit to people — but the first year will be the toughest."

"July 1 is the latest day to plant. I like the end of May or the first of June. When I am talking about timing," he said, "I'm talking about (central Virginia.) North Carolina and Delaware need to adjust the time you want to get a balance between cool season and warm."

Regardless of the form in which his livestock eats it, Bermuda grass has not disappointed Phillips.

"You can graze it, bale it square or round, or use high-moisture wrap," he said. Unlike alfalfa, Phillips has seen none of the bloating problem with Bermuda grass. Moreover, every breed of livestock likes it.

"Horses love it," Phillips stated. "When horse people catch on to Bermuda, it's going to go."

Wally and Carol Young of Roanoke own a sport horse enterprise. They quietly processed the event's information and engaged in discussion with Bill and Karen Webb, Calloway, Va., friends whom they depend on to sell them hay.

The group heard positive testimonials about horses grazing in Bermuda pastures. Apparently, the grass is so sweet that World Feeder — a cold-tolerant variety of Bermuda grass — distributor Wayne Thompson said that if you twist some off at the top, a watermelon-like odor is released.

Michael and Susan Phillips of Harrisonburg are backdropped by a landscape of rolling hills and continuous Shenandoah Valley mountain ranges near Endless Caverns. In 2000, the progressive thinkers began an experiment with Bermuda grass to test reports that it can end a farmer's feeding bills with good stewardship and management.

Discussing pros and cons of World Feeder Bermuda grass at a field day near Harrisonburg are Bill and Karen Webb, Calloway, Va., foreground; Wally and Carol Young, Roanoke, sport horse dealers; and their son, Taylor, age 10.

This Bermuda grass sprig planter was adapted from a tobacco planter.

"I want to nail down the cost," said Young. 'I am thinking about doing four acres and seeing how it goes."

Carol Young added: "We have eight horses, own eight acres and lease eight acres. You expect to have to feed in winter — that's a given, but we have been feeding hay since June."

The Webbs own 80 acres and keep 20 dairy cows and 28 beef cattle, in addition to selling hay.

"Creeks that haven't been dry since I was a kid are bone dry," reported Bill Webb about this year's lack of rainfall.

Within the 350 acres Phillips owns and rents, the rotational layout is designed to enable cows and ewes from their separate paddocks to access water in the same frost-proof troughs. Two miles of lines transport water from two wells to grazing areas. The cows' grazing land is crossed by some seven miles of high tensile electric fence. Ewe pastures, however, are fenced with woven wire.

For sheep, "I feel more comfortable with woven wire," Phillips said.

He stays as far from the plow as possible, preferring to farm the no-till way.

"I do not like erosion. If I plow the ground I will have erosion," he said. "No-till farming is better than plowing to the fence row like my grandfather," he said. "If I farmed like my grandfather, I couldn't make it in this world."

"I want to know all about my grandfather, but I can't follow his footsteps."

Susan Phillips is also keen on conservation practices.

In addition to her responsibilities at home and on the farm, these days Susan works with the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center, on a program entitled "Monitoring the Future."

Michael is the eighth generation on the farm that was originally passed down through his mother's family, until going to his dad's side. Phillips says every bit of skill and agricultural knowledge he possesses, was acquired from his parents — Johnnie O. and Betty Phillips.

The World Feeder Bermuda Field Day participants represented the dairy, beef, sheep and horse industries in at least 5 states.

Emergency Forage Production

Paul H. Craig
Forage Agent
Dauphin County

Across the Capital Region, the 2002 drought has taken a tremendous toll on forage production. Estimates of silage yields are that losses will exceed 75 percent in many areas. In addition, what silage has been produced and harvested will be far short of the needs of many dairy and livestock producers.

Traditionally, producers estimate that the ear makes up about 40-50 percent of the tonnage of silage. This year, the drought hit early. When the critical pollination period came, the crop was under extreme stress and poor pollination resulted. Following pollination, very little rainfall produced a silage crop with small, if any ears. As a result of this short crop, many dairy and beef cattle producers are considering what options for emergency forage they have.

By mid-September, the only crops available to plant this fall will be small grains: oats, rye, wheat and barley. Successful planting of these crops is dependent upon certain management factors. The first consideration is soil moisture.

Another consideration for double cropping would be which corn herbicides were used this season. Early season rains were helpful in reducing the affect of soil herbicides but the unusual drought conditions could possibly result in many instances of higher than normal residual levels. Oats are the most susceptible of small grains to atrazine. Barley is the next most susceptible, followed by wheat. Rye is the least susceptible small grain to atrazine. Producers considering these crops should consult the pesticide label and their agronomic product suppliers for their opinions.

Oats planted in late summer have the potential to provide three to five tons of forage this fall, depending on the length of the growing season. Oats can survive fairly heavy frosts and still develop. The oats will head out, and delaying harvest as long as possible will increase tonnage and feed quality. Late fall conditions can be a challenge to get adequate wilting for ensilage. The use of inoculants will be beneficial. Many graziers have incorporated no-tilling oats into pastures on a regular basis. Plant two to three bushels per acre. Bin run seed can reduce costs if germination is checked.

Winter grains can also provide forage this fall if planted early and at higher seeding rates. Most production will be next spring. If harvested or grazed this fall, try to leave three inches of growth. Many growers are considering mixing two bushels of oats with these winter small grains. The oats will be harvested this fall and then freeze out.

For optimum production, the addition of 40 to 50 pounds of nitrogen (N) is recommended. In many fields there should be enough unused N from the corn crop. Growers will need to evaluate this on a field-by-field situation.

New Alfalfa Council Variety Leaflet Available

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Alfalfa Council recently released the new 2002-2003 "Fall Dormancy and Pest Resistance Ratings for Alfalfa Varieties" leaflet. Alfalfa growers can use this publication to select varieties that are right for their climate and growing conditions. This year, more than 55 marketers and 250 alfalfa varieties are listed in the publication. The reader-friendly leaflet will once again feature the square, booklet-type format that debuted a few years earlier.

The leaflet lists the alfalfa varieties' fall dormancy and pest resistance ratings for the current year from information taken from the Association of Official Seed Certifying Agencies (AOSCA), and the National Alfalfa Variety Review Board (NAVRB) Report.

Copies are available for 50 cents each by calling the Alfalfa Council at (816) 584-8169 or visiting the Website at www.alfalfa.org.

members who are located in NRCS offices across the state. I am the leader of the team and I am very proud of each and every one of its members.

The team came about because Robin realized that grazing interest in Pennsylvania was on the rise. NRCS is the federal agency that provides technical assistance to help protect and preserve our nations natural resources. If NRCS were going to keep abreast of this rising interest in grazing in Pennsylvania, it was decided that additional personnel would be needed.

Earlier this year Robin hired two new employees to serve as grazing specialists, and converted one existing employee to a full time grazing specialist. These three new positions plus the three existing specialist make up the team. Let's meet the team.

Working in the Northwest is Tim Elder. Tim is one of the newest members of the team. If we were talking about a sports team he might be called a rookie, but on our grazing team he might be called the newest paddock. However, Tim comes to us with a fair amount of experience and so it is hard to call him a rookie. Tim's office is located in our Clarion Technical Office and can be reached at (814) 226-8160.

Working in the Southwest is J. B. Harrold. J. B. has been working for NRCS for several years as a grazing specialist, and we might call him a veteran on the team. He is definitely a seasoned veteran and has provided plenty of grazing technical assistance to Southeastern Pennsylvania. J. B.'s office is located in our Somerset Technical Center and he can be reached at (814) 445-8979 ext. 119. J. B. is also a practicing grazier on his own farm, where he raises replacement heifers.

Another of our seasoned veterans is Suzette Brought. She serves the South Central region of Pennsylvania. Like J. B., Suzette has provided a considerable amount of technical assistance in her area of work on grazing systems. Suzette is also a practicing grazier on her own farm. Suzette's office is in the Fulton County NRCS office located in McConnellsburg. Her phone number is (717) 485-3812 ext. 109.

Located in Northeast Pennsylvania is Kris Ribble, another rookie to the team. Kris, while being a new member on the team, will soon be off and doing grazing systems for producers in his area. Kris has ambitions to purchase his own farm and to become a practicing grazier. His office is located in the Bradford County NRCS office located in Towanda. He can be reached at (570) 265-6969 ext. 117.

The fifth member of the team is another seasoned grazier and her name is Jana Malot. Jana serves as a grazing specialist for all of Pennsylvania with an emphasis on animal science. Currently Jana and I will cover Southeast Pennsylvania. Jana is a practicing grazer of a beef herd and horses. Her office is also located in the Fulton County NRCS office located in McConnellsburg. Her phone number is (717) 485-3812 ext. 101.

I make up the sixth member of the team. My area of responsibility is the entire state, but right now, as I indicated earlier, Jana and I share the Southeast until a fulltime person is located in that area. My office is located in the Harrisburg State Office of NRCS and you can reach me at (717) 237-2221.

Robin has plans to hire two additional people for the team. One will be a grazing specialist for the Southeast and the other would be an animal scientist. These positions will be filled later this year. By now you are wondering why all this interest in grazing or what is causing this interest. Much of this interest is being generated because of a producer's need to reduce feed costs to improve the bottom line, plus an interest in a relaxed lifestyle afforded by grazing. A second reason for this renewed interest is the expansion of Project Grass.

Several years ago I did a piece on Project Grass but I will try to give you a quick overview of it. Project Grass is a cooperative effort by local farmers and county conservation districts with the assistance of agencies such as NRCS and Penn State Cooperative Extension. Project Grass's major objectives are:

- To enhance Pennsylvania's agriculture through better utilization of grasslands;
- Improve economics of Pennsylvania farmers;
- Increase livestock production in Pennsylvania and
- Achieve better utilization of land and water resources for improved environmental quality.

Project Grass has expanded from its original area in Southwestern Pennsylvania to now covering more than ¼ of the state. The only area that does not have an organized chapter of Project Grass is the Southeast and they are in the process of organizing a committee to put such a chapter in place. The NRCS has responded to this increasing demand for technical assistance by putting the grazing team in place to help meet this expanding need. As I said earlier there is also a plan to put a specialist in the southeast area which will then give full coverage for all the Project Grass chapters.

It is evident through the creation of an NRCS Grazing Team and the expansion of Project Grass to a statewide organization that the grazing interest in Pennsylvania is on the increase. If I or one of the other grazing team members can help you with your grazing needs please give us a call. You can also contact me by e-mail me at duane.pysher@pa.usda.gov, or write to me at NRCS, One Credit Union Place, Suite 340, Harrisburg, PA, 17110-2993.

Until next time, happy grazing.

Phoma Crown Rot — The Traffic Disease

Of the many disease pathogens known to kill alfalfa seedlings, reduce yields and shorten stand life, only one — Phoma crown rot is called the "Traffic Disease."

A part of the crown rot complex of fungi and bacteria found in nearly every alfalfa-growing region of the U.S., Phoma crown rot is frequently associated with the crown damage resulting from wheel traffic and heavy grazing pressure. The disease commonly attacks the central portion of the crown, destroying crown buds and resulting in weakened plants, reduced stand life, and declining yields. Researchers say that stands more than two years old are particularly vulnerable to this disease.

"There's probably a greater incidence of Phoma crown rot than many growers realize," said Jim Moutray, director of research for America's Alfalfa. "It's an opportunistic pathogen that tends to penetrate plant crowns after they have been damaged by wheel or grazing traffic, hence the name, the "Traffic Disease."

While it's difficult to measure the amount of yield lost to Phoma crown rot alone, recent field trails at the University of Wisconsin have demonstrated that wheel traffic — and associated diseases can reduce alfalfa yields by as much as 70 percent on any given harvest. Now, alfalfa growers can protect their stands from Phoma crown rot and the yield losses associated with wheel traffic with new AmeriStand 403T, the first and only Traffic Tested™ variety bred to deliver more yield under every wheel.

Selected from parent stock proven to withstand intense grazing and wheel traffic, AmeriStand 403T has the genetic potential to produce crowns and roots nearly twice the size of many conventional varieties. Not only is AmeriStand 403T the first variety offering a high level of resistance to Phoma crown rot, but it is also highly resistant to other major diseases including Aphanomyces root rot. Phytophthora root rot, Verticillium wilt, Fusarium wilt, and Anthracnose. Because AmeriStand 403T combines the winterhardiness of a "2" fall dormant variety with the yield potential of a "4" dormancy full-season variety, it is adapted to nearly all alfalfa-growing areas of the country. Last year, this variety became the first full-season variety to earn a winter survival rating of 1.8 — the highest such rating ever awarded a full-season variety in the nation's only independent university trials.

The offspring of 148 parent clones, AmeriStand 403T was introduced in limited supplies in 2001. Growers who have now completed their first two full harvest seasons with this new variety have reported exceptional stand establishment, rapid root and crown development, and big yields of high quality hay.

❖ SPECIAL REPORT ❖

• Cattle are herd animals and isolation of a single individual should be avoided.

Break Old Habits

• To fully master quiet gathering of cattle from a pasture, you must avoid whooping, hollering, and running.

• Do not chase cattle from the rear of the group (makes you seem like the predator).

• Spend time walking or riding among your cattle so they do not always associate you with feeding or corrals. The animals need to learn that you are neither predator or feed wagon.

Working in Corrals

• Cattle movements are under your control at all times. It is important for your cattle to learn that you control their movements and they cannot escape from you. Never allow cattle to run wildly out of a corral. Make them walk past you at the exit gate. When a new set of corrals is used, avoid doing painful procedures. Train the cattle to the new system using procedures such as sorting or weighing. A handy tool for sorting is a stick with a flag or a paddle on the end. Blocking the animal's vision on one side with a paddle or flag will cause it to turn.

• A stick or whip with plastic streamers or a garbage bag tied on the end is useful for turning cattle in the crowd pen.

• An animal should never be prodded until it has a place to go.

• If tail twisting is used to move a cow up a chute, let go of the tail when the cow moves to reward her for moving.

Vision and Facility Design

Cattle have poor depth perception when they move with their heads up. To see depth they have to stop and put their heads down.

• A single shadow that falls across a scale or loading chute can disrupt handling.

• Balking can also be caused by a small bright spot formed by the sun's rays coming through a hole in the roof.

• Drain gates in the middle of the floor make cattle balk.

• Animals balk if they see a moving or flapping object. A coat flung over a chute fence or the shiny reflection off a car bumper will cause balking.

• Cattle tend to move toward the light. If you ever have to load cattle at night, it is strongly recommended that frosted lamps that do not glare in the animal's face be positioned inside the truck. Loading chutes and squeeze chutes should face either north or south. Livestock will balk if they have to look directly into the sun.

• Numerous investigators have now confirmed that cattle and other species possess color vision. Handling facilities should be one uniform color. Animals will balk at sudden changes in color or texture.

• Sometimes it is difficult to persuade cattle to enter a roofed working area.

• Livestock will balk if a chute appears to be a dead-end.

• The sides of the single-file chute and the crowding pen should be solid. Cattle should be able to see at least two body-lengths ahead in a curved chute.

• Curved chutes work because they prevent the animal from seeing the truck, squeeze chute, or people until it is almost in the truck or squeeze chute. Furthermore, curved chutes work because they take advantage of the animal's natural tendency to circle around the handler.

• Five-foot fences usually are sufficient for cattle such as Hereford and Angus.

• If a V-shaped chute is built, it should be 16-18 inches wide at the bottom and 32-36 inches wide at the top. If the chute has straight sides, 26 inches is sufficient for cows and 18-20 inches wide for calves.

• The recommended radius for a crowd pen is 12 feet. The minimum is 10 feet.

• Orienting the exit of a sorting chute or squeeze chute towards the "home" pasture or pen will facilitate movement.

Restraint

• Many squeeze chutes can be improved by replacing the barred sides with solid drop-down panels for access to the animals.

• A solid gate located about three to four feet in front of the headgate can help prevent cattle from trying to run through the headgate.

• Applying squeeze pressure slowly instead of suddenly can have a calming effect on animals. Avoid applying excessive pressure that may cause pain. Release pressure slowly. Sudden release of pressure causes the animal to become excited.

Loading Chutes

• Equip loading chutes with telescoping side panels and a self-aligning dock bumper.

• A well-designed loading ramp has a level landing at the top.

• The slope of a permanently installed cattle ramp should not exceed 20 degrees.

• Chutes for loading and unloading cattle should also have solid sides and a gradual curve.

• A loading chute for cattle should be 30 inches wide and no wider. The largest bulls will fit through a 30 inch wide chute.

Drought Effects On Feed And Livestock

Herd Health Agent
Capitol Region

Use caution in using drought-stressed crops as green-chop as the fresh forage may contain high nitrate levels. Allowing the fermentation process to progress for at least three weeks can reduce nitrate levels by 40 to 60 percent.

Symptoms of nitrate toxicity will vary with the level fed. Reproductive problems may be seen at nitrate levels of 0.4 percent or greater on a dry matter basis. Higher levels of nitrates can cause labored breathing and marked salivation, leading to death in a short time.

Stressed plants are also more susceptible to mold infections leading to the possibility of mycotoxins in the harvested feeds. Remember that fermentation will not decrease the level of mycotoxins. Mycotoxins can have many effects, from reproductive problems, decreased feed intake and decreased production, to many other health problems associated with depressed immune function.

Feed value of drought-stressed forages is always a question. My sources indicate that as a rule, drought-stressed corn will be somewhat higher in fiber and lower in energy and a bit higher in protein than normal corn silage.

One of the hardest things to access but one of the most important factors influencing feed value is moisture content at harvest. Total crop moisture of 60-70 percent at harvest is ideal. Harvest too soon and the result will be poor fermentation with loss of feed value through seepage. Dry forage will not pack and ferment well either. The tendency in droughty conditions is to harvest too soon. Corn stalks with dried leaves will contain moisture in the stalk and stalks with no or small ears will be higher in moisture. On the converse, corn may dry down so quickly that the window of time at proper moisture is very narrow. It will take careful watching to get it right.

Problems with poisonous weeds may increase in times of drought. Ensiling often does not destroy the toxic substances either. Some of these noxious weeds may only cause a reduction in appetite while others can lead to death. Animals turned out on pasture areas will be more likely to eat things that they normally wouldn't as forage sources diminish.

Baylor Named Honorary Member Of ASTA

Longtime Agronomist Founded PFGC

Dr. John E. Baylor, executive director of the Atlantic Seedsmen's Association, was named an Honorary Member of the American Seed Trade Association (ASTA) on June 24 by outgoing ASTA President Drew Kinder. Baylor received this prestigious honor for long and outstanding service to the seed industry. He became the 96th Honorary Member to be named by ASTA since 1907.

Born on a dairy farm, Baylor took up farm crops at Rutgers University, where he received B.S. and M.S. degrees.

Following military service in World War II, he began his career in agriculture as an extension specialist at Rutgers from 1948 to 1955. This job introduced him to the seed industry.

In 1955, he moved on to Pennsylvania State University for a doctorate degree in agronomy. He later joined the faculty there as an extension forage specialist. He got more exposure to the seed industry there, and became known as an expert on alfalfa management and production. His innovative Hay and Silage Show Educational Programs and Alfalfa Growers' Program received national attention.

While Baylor was tempted by the private sector to leave academia, he remained at Penn State for 26 years, retiring in 1983 as Professor Emeritus of Agronomy and Coordinator of Agronomy Extension. But Baylor decided that he could not fully retire at this juncture. He took a part-time position with Beachley-Hardy Seed Company as director of market development. Similar to his public sector work, he evaluated all new germplasm for the company, working with suppliers in recommending which germplasm should be made available to forage and livestock farmers. He stayed with this regional company until 1991.

While working for Beachley-Hardy in 1987, Baylor also took on the leadership of the Atlantic Seedsmen's Association (ASA) on a part-time basis. He was charged with turning around the fledgling association, a task that he accomplished by expanding ASA's focus to the entire seed industry, not just the turf sector.

In Kinder's view, this was Baylor's greatest accomplishment in the seed industry.

"Many of us who were active in the Atlantic at the time give him credit for saving that organization from extinction," Kinder said. "He took control immediately, rebuilding membership, raising the Atlantic's profile, and upgrading the quality of its business meetings."

"I am very proud to have been part of ASA's growth," Baylor said.

Kinder also noted that Baylor has always been a stalwart supporter of ASTA.

"The Atlantic serves as the eyes and ears in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic states," he noted. "We can always count on John to keep us informed of legislative and regulatory issues."

Baylor noted that the biggest influence on the Northeast has been the mergers and acquisitions of seed companies as well as a shift in seed usage in the region. Turf seed usage remains high, vegetable and flower seed usage has increased, and field seed usage has declined, he said.

"In academia, he added, "there has been a change in emphasis from production agriculture to consumer research and marketing. Consumer demands for more nutritious and convenient products are driving research and development as opposed to emphasis on production improvements.

"In the private sector," he continued, "modern biotechnology and intellectual property protection are changing the landscape of the industry as well. People entering the seed industry today must be aware of these changes and adjust to them."

Among many professional accomplishments, Baylor founded the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) and a related foundation to fund scientists' travel to international meetings. Both organizations are still in existence today. He served as executive vice president of the PFGC on a voluntary basis for 25 years. He also served on the board of the American Forage and Grassland Council (AFGC) for 20 years and is a past-president of the organization.

Moreover, Baylor is a fellow of the American Society of Agronomy and Crop Science Society of America. He was named by the ASA as "Seedsman of the Year" and honorary member and as a Distinguished Grasslander by the AFGC. In addition to honors from the AFGC and PFGC, Baylor was lauded during his university days by the American Society of Agronomy.

In early 2003, Baylor will retire for the third time. He will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the ASA at its annual meeting on Hilton Head Island, S.C., Oct. 12-15. He will include this historic event in his writing of the fifth decade of ASA history to be published in early 2003. Baylor previously published a 40-year history of the ASA.

PFGC ❖ President's Corner ❖

Greetings once again from New Tripoli, Pa.

Most organizations' presidential corners speak of matters important to their group such as membership, coming activities, research, and other efforts the group makes to advance the industry they represent.

This one is a warning to all.

Earlier this summer I briefly brought you my thoughts about a violation that I incurred for not having a hay field mowed by June 1. In an effort to avoid fines and penalties, the field was made into hay shortly thereafter. But what about other vegetation, corn, wheat, soybeans, trees, flowers? I asked the Lynn township administrator for a clarification of the ordinance that I was cited under. Perhaps there was an agricultural exemption to this ordinance? As it stood:

"Failure to mow this vegetation, weeds, and grass could result in fines and penalties being levied by Lynn Township. Please attend to this matter and have your property mowed within 15 days of receipt of this notice to avoid prosecution" was the law of the land.

The response was even more ominous than the initial notice of violation.

As it is, the township ordinance does offer some exemptions for certain vegetation.

"No person shall permit any grass or weeds or any vegetation whatsoever, which is not edible, planted for some useful or ornamental purpose or planted for agricultural purpose, to grow or remain upon the premises as to exceed twelve inches."

A number of questions about my farming operation then followed.

"Was the meadow at this site 'planted' with this crop? What was the planting date? What was the specific crop?"

These questions indicate to me that the township is now interested in maintaining a registry of my agricultural practices.

A central committee of planners apparently will determine if the seed we use is appropriate, if the seeding dates are right, and if the ultimate uses meet their approval.

We made some very nice timothy-mixed hay from the field that is under consideration in this discussion. It will probably be fed to animals requiring high quality forage, a very useful and agricultural purpose.

Suppose that the field was ruined due to rain, or matured beyond the optimum and was made as mulch. Would we meet the criteria the township uses? If a quality timothy-mixed hay does not, what could? Suppose that I were an organic farmer in the strictest sense, weed control by natural means is attempted but certainly not 100 percent effective — would this meet the township criteria?

We as a society have yielded our individual rights a little at a time to the point that ultimately every thing we do requires governmental approval. If it isn't yet subject to their preview you can bet that someone, somewhere is thinking "there ought to be a law."

Best regards,

John Pergosky

GEHL. MODEL RB 2580 ROUND BALERS
Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System

GREAT BALING STARTS HERE
Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here's how it works The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and and 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches

The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in-feed roll, in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll, both turning inward, pinches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

Seasoned Graziers Swap Stories At Ag Progress Days

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Graziers need the support of other graziers. They also need to adapt for the unique opportunites and challenges presented on their own operations.

That was the joint message offered by three experienced graziers who spoke at an Ag Progress Days forum here Aug. 20.

"I would advise anyone who's interested in grazing to host a little gathering and pick people's brains," said Dick McElhaney, Hookstown, Beaver County. He rotationally grazes a purebred shorthorn beef herd, running about 45 brood cows on his 100-acre farm. Most of the young stock is sold for reproductive purposes.

At a gathering of graziers, however, don't expect to hear any formula on how to set up your operation, McElhaney pointed out.

"I never heard anything definitive (from other graziers)," he said. "Just — you could try this or you could try that."

Titus Martin, dairy grazier from Ti-Lin Holsteins, Fayetteville, Franklin County, said that one of the best things about meeting with other graziers is the sense of solidarity it can give. In tough times — such as a drought year like this one — it may become even more important.

"You need support to know you're not alone, not the only one with dried-up grass," Martin said.

Martin, along with his wife Linda and son Dustin, first began to convert to a grazing operation for their Holstein herd in 1993. Through a variety of challenges and learning experiences in subsequent years, Martin became an advocate of grazing. In 2000, he printed a summary of how the Ti-Lin grazing system had developed, titling it "Grazing: More Profit — Less Work. It's Great".

Martin had the longterm future of the dairy in mind when he made the switch to a grass-based program.

"One of the things I like about grazing is that my son likes grazing," Martin said. He noted that Dustin, 21, probably would no longer be on the farm if it were not for the change.

The Martin's farm is laid out in one-acre paddocks, with a combination of permanent and moveable fencing. A variety of forages, including annual ryegrass, alfalfa, and perennial grasses typically provide 50 percent of the 125-cow herd's dry matter needs during grazing season.

For fencing, Martin advised new graziers to go slow in setting up permanent structures.

"Start everything temporary because after a year you're going to change everything," he said.

Graziers Titus Martin, Dick McElhaney, and Tom Calvert share their experiences with an Ag Progress Days audience.

Tom Calvert, sheep grazier from Somerset County, said the grazing system for his 100 brood ewes and their lambs is constantly undergoing improvement.

"Every time I take a walk, I see things that need to change," he said.

According to Calvert, about half the fencing on the farm is portable, and the other half is "some semblance of permanent."

"I try to maintain the fencing system so the whole farm can be grazed, including the (50-acre) share-cropped part," he said.

Calvert said graziers continually need to be making decisions, such as which animals and (forage) plants to keep, and which type of fencing to use for a particular situation.

"A whole bunch of this grazing management is making decisions," he said.

The topic of fescue — a grass well-known for its late-season forage production capabilities — generated various opinions from panel members.

Martin offered this warning, based on his own experience with the grass taking over other forages in mixed pastures: "For other (graziers) considering planting fescue, don't!"

Calvert pointed out that fescue can be a valuable source of forage in the right situation.

"I can show you beef operations that live on it," he said. "That's their winter feed."

However, "Don't plant it until you want it," Calvert said.

Other observations offered by the panel:

- Harvest orchardgrass in wrapped "silage" bales in May. "If you wait until dry weather to make hay, the orchardgrass gets too mature." (McElhaney)
- "I like production animals to eat, drink, and sleep in the same place." (Calvert)
- Standing dry grass, three to four inches tall, is "standing hay." The cows "might as well graze it down." (Martin)

Nutritive Value Of Drought Soybeans As A Forage Crop

R.S. Adams, Emeritus
Professor of Dairy Science
Penn State

Drought stricken soybean plants can be used as a forage crop. Allow plants to mature as much as possible before harvesting. Some pod or bean development enhances feeding value of plants harvested either as hay or silage. Soybean forages are high in calcium (about 1.3 percent on a dry basis). For this reason it should be avoided as the major forage for dry cows.

If ensiling, it is important to ensile before plant moisture drops below 60-65 percent. If possible, mix soybeans with other forages, preferably during ensiling, to enhance their palatability. If plants are high in moisture and lack pod or bean development, add 100-200 pounds of ground grain per ton when direct-cutting rather than wilting to 60-65 percent moisture.

Stems are not very palatable, and if animals have the opportunity, they will sort them out. Chopping hay and feeding it in a total mixed ration (TMR) will help prevent sorting, and stretch forage supplies.

If soybean forage contains substantial amounts of developed beans, reduce the amounts of other fats and oils in the ration, or the ration may be too laxative. Also, it may be difficult to dry down pods for hay if beans are too well developed. Soybeans can be pastured. If cows are removed before all stems are eaten, there may be regrowth.

Precautionary note: You need to consider some of the herbicide restrictions. If you look on page 118 in the 1995-1996 Agronomy Guide, you will find feeding restrictions on soybean forage and grain. unfortunately, with few exceptions, most soybean herbicides do not allow feeding the soybean plant as forage. The exceptions are Basagran, Lexone, or Sencor, and Lasso/MicroTech. I suspect that the reason that most of the newer herbicides don't allow this use is because the ingredients simply never received a forage tolerance. Soybeans are not typically harvested as forage and it costs the manufacturer a great deal of money to conduct tolerance/residue studies. Think about how few products we have labeled on alfalfa. Although this explanation may not help, it is on the product use label.

Keswick Creamery And Luscious Meadows To Host Field Day

NEWBURG (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), the Dietrich family, and the Branch Creek Farmers Market will host a tour of artisanal farmstead cheese production from the cheesemaking room to the market here Sept. 19.

Melanie Dietrich and brother Ian Dietrich, young cheesemakers, will describe how they learned their techniques and where they obtained the necessary equipment. The tour group will then travel to the Branch Creek Farmers Market in Shippensburg, where managers of the South Central Farmers Market Association will describe what it took to get their market started, and successes and challenges they've met along the way.

There will be a short tour of the Dietrich Farm where 45 Jersey cows are milked to supply for the cheese. The Dietrichs began making cheese in February 2001. By the end of the year, they were selling at the Branch Creek Market and at the Freshfarm Market at Dupont Circle in Washington, D.C.

The cheese is made from raw milk, naturally aged over 60 days. Varieties include cheddar, feta, wallaby (a wild-mold ripened cheese) and dragon's breath (a hot pepper jack). The whey from cheesemaking is fed to pastured hogs which are sold at the farmers market.

The tour will take place from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. To register, call PASA at (814) 349-9856 ext. 6. Cost is $10, including local lunch.

Call PASA to make alternative payment arrangements.

KEEDYSVILLE, Md. — A Maryland dairy farm survey shows participating graziers have averaged higher net gains per hundredweight of milk than participating confinement dairies over a five-year period.

Dale Johnson, farm management specialist at the Western Maryland Research and Education Center, is conducting the ongoing summary of income, expenses, and profits along with Don Schwartz, extension educator in Washington County. The table above reports figures on 11 grazing herds and 19 confinement herds from the years 1997-2001.

Johnson noted that the "most useful" profit figures of the summary are those referring to profit per hundredweight (CWT). Using profit per CWT is the most accurate way to "compare apples to apples" when considering different types of dairy operations, Johnson said.

He also noted that farmers are participating in the summary on a voluntary basis, thus their farms may not represent the Maryland dairy industry as a whole.

An Introduction To Perennial Warm-Season Grasses

Excerpted From Ohio State University Web Site Information

The native, perennial warm-season grasses have potential to produce good hay and pasture growth during the warm and dry mid-summer months. These grasses initiate growth in late April or early May, and produce 65 to 75 percent of their growth from mid-June to mid-August in Ohio. Warm-season grasses produce well compared to cool-season grasses during the hot and dry weather of July and August, and on soils with low moisture holding capacity, low pH and low phosphorous levels.

The cool-season grasses produce surplus production in May and June, are less productive during the mid-summer period, and become more productive again in the fall with the advent of cooler weather and fall moisture. Warm-season grasses can be an attractive compliment to these cool-season species by providing forage when the cool-season grasses are less productive. Having part of the grazing area in warm-season perennial grasses would enable the accumulation (stockpiling) of cool-season forage growth from July through September for grazing later in the fall, thus extending the total grazing season.

Utilizing both cool-and warm-season species should provide more uniform season-long forage production.

Recently there has been increasing interest from the Midwest in several of the native perennial warm-season grasses for livestock forage. These include switchgrass, big bluestem, indiangrass, and eastern gamagrass. Many of these grasses dominated the upland prairies from Ohio to Kansas and Nebraska prior to settlement. Although the early Ohio settlers largely found forests, areas of prairie grassland were found, primarily in western Ohio.

Adaptation, Species and Varieties

Switchgrass, indiangrass and big bluestem are winter hardy and will grow in all areas of Ohio. They do best on deep, fertile, well-drained soils with a good water-holding capacity. These grasses can be seeded alone or as a mixture. Seeding a single grass species is preferred because mixed species are difficult to manage. Legumes or cool-season grasses generally are not suited for planting with warm-season grasses because of interplant competition with the seedling grasses. Warm season legumes such as Marion Lespedeza can be planted after the grasses are established. Eastern gamagrass may also have potential in Ohio, but experience and data are very limited. There is some interest in caucasian bluestem, but there are some concerns with this species as discussed below.

Switchgrass (Panicum virgatum) is a tall, rhizomatous perennial that grows three to five feet tall. It appears bunch-like, but the short rhizomes may produce a coarse sod under grazing. Later in the season, leafy regrowth develops from basal tillers and shoots emerging along the lower stems at leaf nodes. Switchgrass tolerates poorly drained soils, occasional flooding, and perched water tables better than other warm-season grasses.

Leaves and stems of switchgrass have good forage value and are readily grazed by livestock in the immature stage; however, it is considered to be of lower forage quality than big bluestem or indiangrass.

Palatability and nutrient content of switchgrass stems decline rapidly after heading. Switchgrass is often the first choice among farmers trying a warm-season grass for the first time. The seed is clean, free flowing and can be seeded with standard forage seeding equipment. Improved varieties of switchgrass for use in Ohio are Blackwell, Trailblazer and Cave-in-Rock. Cave-in-Rock is more palatable for livestock than other adapted varieties and it yields well in Ohio (Table 1). Niagra has performed well in Pennsylvania.

Big bluestem (Andropogon geradi) is an erect, robust, perennial bunchgrass that grows three to six feet tall and is often reddish-purple at maturity. It produces foliage in late spring from buds at basal nodes and from short, scaly rhizomes. Growing points stay close to the ground until late summer when heads appear. It is considered more palatable than switchgrass or indiangrass, especially after maturity. Big bluestem is more drought tolerant than other warm-season grasses and thus is better adapted to excessively drained soils with low water-holding capacity. The seed is light, chaffy and difficult to seed without a special grassland drill. The varieties Kaw, Roundtree, and Pawnee are suggested.

Indiangrass (Sorghastrum nutans) is an erect, robust perennial growing three to six feet tall. It has short, knobby rhizomes and spreads slowly. Indiangrass starts growth somewhat later than switchgrass or big bluestem and provides good quality forage during much of the summer. It is moderately palatable after heading. Indiangrass can be planted on moderately well-drained soils and can withstand occasional flooding. The seed is light, chaffy and difficult to seed without a special grassland drill. The varieties Osage and Oto have been tested in Ohio. Rumsey is a newer variety that should do well in Ohio also.

Eastern gamagrass (Tripsacum dactyloides) is a lesser known native warm-season grass. It is a robust, upright, leafy bunchgrass that grows to six to 12 feet. It is adapted to deep soils with good water-holding capacity. In natural habitats it grows in fertile bot-

USDA Authorizes Emergency Haying, Grazing Nationally For Drought Relief

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently authorized emergency haying and grazing on Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) acres nationally to provide relief for farmers and ranchers in areas hardest hit by drought and other natural disasters. Previously, emergency haying and grazing was limited to 18 states.

"Extreme weather conditions have impacted so many farmers and ranchers this year, particularly livestock producers," said Veneman. "This Administration continues to utilize every available program to provide assistance and this decision will provide additional feed and forage to producers who have lost their hay stocks and grazing lands due to the recent disasters. It is our hope, that in the American tradition of neighbor helping neighbor, CRP participants in areas not affected by these disasters will make their CRP acreage available for haying or grazing or donate hay to those in need."

Generally, to be approved for emergency haying or grazing, a county must have suffered at least a 40-percent loss of normal moisture and forage for the preceding four-month qualifying period. The Farm Service Agency (FSA) will notify its State Committees that the 40-percent loss criterion no longer applies. State FSA committees may limit the area within the states if conditions do not warrant haying and grazing in all areas. CRP participants, where authorized, have until Nov. 30, 2002, to submit applications with their local FSA office for emergency haying or grazing. Conditions for participation and other details are available from local FSA offices.

CRP participants who do not own or lease livestock may donate, rent or lease the hay or the haying or grazing privileges. CRP annual rental payments made to participants will be reduced 25 percent to account for the areas hayed or grazed, unless the hay or the haying or grazing privileges are donated. For the welfare of wildlife, at least 25 percent of the CRP contract acreage must be left ungrazed or unhayed.

USDA has developed a Website for producers to list information concerning the need for hay or the availability of hay for sale or donation. More than 600 ads have been posted to the site; the majority from people selling hay, and more than 9,700 sessions have been recorded. The Hay Net may be found on the FSA Internet home page at http://www.usda.fsa.gov.

CRP is a voluntary program that offers annual rental payments and cost-share assistance to establish long-term resource-conserving cover on eligible land. This action will permit CRP participants to graze livestock or hay on ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — This year's PFGC Hay Show at Ag Progress Days had the highest number of entries in more than 10 years. The total number of entries (149) was nine greater than the previous record.

"I believe that this is a direct reflection of the good hay making weather that we have had this year," said Dr. Marvin Hall, forage extension specialist at Penn State.

Hall coordinates the Hay Show and expected a large number of samples, but was surprised by the how many.

"I was hoping that the good hay making weather would cause an increase in entries, but I had no idea we would get this many entries," he said.

This visual appearance of the samples was good and this was reflected in the chemical analysis for quality. Averaged across all samples, crude protein was 18.4, acid detergent fiber (ADF) was 31, neutral detergent fiber (NDF) was 47, and relative feed value (calculated from ADF and NDF) was 138. The relative feed value was 15 points higher this year than last. Numerous exhibitors and visitors at the Hay Show echoed Hall's feelings that the weather had cooperated with hay making this year.

The champion in the field-cured division was Duane Shuman from Bloomsburg, Columbia County, with an entry of later cut alfalfa. The champion in the heat-dried division was Bob Bieber from Nazareth, Northampton County, with an entry of first cut alfalfa. Champion in the preservative division was Wilmer Kuhns from Chambersburg, Franklin County, with a later cutting of alfalfa. Duane Shuman had the champion hay sample in the "heat dried" division last year and mover into the champion position in the field dried division this year.

USDA has a variety of programs available to help eligible farmers recover from adversity. The Emergency Loan Program makes farmers and ranchers immediately eligible for USDA low interest emergency (EM) loans in agricultural disaster areas. The Emergency Conservation Program helps producers rehabilitate farmlands, damaged by natural disasters. The Federal Crop Insurance program provides indemnities for production and revenue losses; and the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program, provides financial assistance to eligible producers affected by natural disasters. Secretary Veneman recently authorized a $150 million feed assistance program to help cow-calf operators in Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, and South Dakota, who are suffering from adverse weather affecting pasture and forage crops.

Lehigh Hay Exporter Keeps Delivering In Drought Year

until late October.

For the timothy crop this year, Fink said he met his goal of making "one good cutting." By mid to late June, the crop was already made before drought conditions could hurt it.

Newly-applied controls for cereal mites, recently discovered to affect timothy production and quality, also helped contribute to a "terrific" yield this year, he said.

Timothy fields probably had low levels of mite infestations, hurting the grass for years before researchers identified the problem, Fink noted. He estimated a 10 to 20 percent boost in production and better quality with "not so much brown leaf in it anymore" since applying the mite control.

Most of the total of 2,700 acres harvested per year is cut, conditioned, and harvested with a 15-foot diskbine with "super conditioner" rolls, an eight-star tedder, 18-wheel rake, and 3 foot X 3 foot baler with automatic preservative dispenser which applies buffered proprionic acid to the hay according to the moisture level. According to Fink, this baler works about three times as fast as a conventional small-square baler. Even so, for times when more than 75 tons are scheduled for harvest in a four-hour period, Fink hires a custom baler to help.

The period from mowing to baling is typically 48-60 hours depending on conditions, although "I've put hay away in as little as 28 hours," Fink said.

Hay is stacked indoors and allowed to cure four to six weeks before the hay bales are processed for shipping. Heat and forced air drying is used if necessary.

Each 3 X 3 X 8-foot bale is placed by skid loader into a machine which hydraulically pushes the hay into a steel blade that slices the bale in half lengthwise. This results in two long sections about 18 inches wide and three feet long.

These halves are further divided at the compressing machine, where a 100-horsepower motor presses the hay into dense 15 X 18 X 22-inch bales and secures it with baler twine. Four strings are required to hold this tightly packed forage. The machine compresses about four tons per hour.

None of this process requires that any of the bales be touched by hand, a major improvement from the days when Fink first began compressing hay. Today, even greater efficiency is possible, Fink noted. A single machine that can handle the whole process from splitting the large bales to compressing and tying is on the market, he said.

For customers who prefer to handle lighter-weight bales, another machine can cut these small square bales in half, resulting in 35-40 pound bales with two strings. Heidel Hollow Farm also offers these bales in plastic bags, so the suburban livestock owner can haul hay without a mess.

While the Finks deliver some 3 X 3-foot square bales to area farmers, it's the compressing operation that has established Heidel Hollow Farm as a top international hay supplier, with about 60 percent of its hay destined for export out of the country. The compactness of the product ultimately makes the shipping affordable, despite the $40 processing fee Fink charges on every compressed ton he sells.

Other products from the operation include processed landscaping straw and barley straw kits for algae control in ponds.

And while horses and dairy cattle in various countries are the major consumers of Heidel Hollow hay, they're not the only ones.

"We market (hay) to rabbits and elephants and everything in between," Fink said.

Steve Bachman mans the hay compressor, capable of converting about four tons per hour into dense, compact bales ready for shipping.

Travis Fink is ready to haul this container of about 12 tons of compressed Heidel Hollow hay to docks in Salem, N.J., where it will be loaded on a ship bound for Bermuda.

tomland, swamps, and along streambanks. Eastern gamagrass is one of the earliest warm-season grasses to begin growth in the spring. It is slow to establish but once established produces high yields of good quality forage. Eastern gamagrass is a relative of corn. It has high yield potential and maintains it's quality better when mature that the other species. It has potential to be used for pasture or hay. One drawback to eastern gamagrass is it's need for a long, late summer rest period beginning by mid-August.

Establishing stands of eastern gamagrass that allow haying has been a problem. Eastern gamagrass tends to form rough, clumpy stands that are hard on equipment. Individual plants produce large clumps (up to three feet across) with large bare spaces between plants.

Care should be exercised when considering establishment, because seed dormancy is high and it is very slow to establish. Seed dormancy can be partially overcome by stratification (wet chilling treatment).

Stratified seed cannot be allowed to dry before planting. An alternative may be to make dormant seedings in November through February, but experience and research information are limited. Experience in Kansas has shown that up to four years may be required before acceptable forage production is achieved. In Ohio, experience with this grass is limited. Available varieties are Pete and Iuka.

Caucasian bluestem (Bothriochloa caucasica) is native to southern Russia and is a member of the old world bluestems. Experience with this grass in Ohio is very limited, Caucasian bluestem is a fine-stemmed, leafy grass that is drought tolerant, aggressive, and a prolific seed producer. In the plains states it is considered an undesirable, unpalatable, and aggressive invader of warm-season grass pastures and range. Caucasian bluestem is reported to be quicker to establish than other warm-season grasses and more tolerant of heavy grazing pressure. Studies at the University of Missouri Southwest Research Center reported individual animal performance of caucasian bluestem was slightly lower than switchgrass. But caucasian had more growth which provided more grazing days per acre than switchgrass. When big bluestem and indiangrass can be properly managed, they offer greater animal performance potential than caucasian bluestem.

Caucasian bluestem should be winter hardy in southern Ohio but the full range of adaptation across Ohio is unknown. It is currently not recommended in Ohio because of the lack of information on its adaptation, and because of possible concerns with its aggressiveness as in western states.

Prepared by: Henry M. Bartholomew, associate professor, Ohio State University Extension; R. Mark Sulc, assistant professor, Ohio State University; Robert Hendershot, area resource conservationist, Soil Conservation Service; and Jack Cline, professor emeritus, animal science, Ohio State University.

Indiangrass, front, and big bluestem are two types of warm-season grass being established for conservation purposes in some areas in Pennsylvania. These species were displayed by the Natural Resource Conservation Service at this year's Ag Progress Days in Rockspring.

THE AUGER ONLY WESTFIELD COULD BUILD

Start with a big capacity auger with labor-saving hydraulic lift. Add a convenient swing-hopper. Incorporate an exclusive, totally enclosed gear and chain drive train, powering both the main auger and the swing-hopper. Couple it with a smooth running CV PTO drive line. And you've got the MK - the first practical and economical mechanical-drive swing-hopper auger - an auger only Westfield could build.

The only hydraulic requirement is the labor-saving hydraulic lift. So you can use an older or smaller tractor with limited hydraulic capacity, free-up your larger tractor for other work, and still get big grain moving capacity.

The Westfield MK.

In 8, 10 and 13 inch capacity and lengths up to 71 feet...from the name you can count on for grain auger performance...
